CHILD FALLS INTO COOPER PIGPEN CISTERN, DROWNS

Falling into a pigpen cistern while waiting for his father, who was preparing to go to the general store, two-year-old Barry Graham, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Graham, of Cooper, 19 miles north of Madoc, was drowned Wednesday morning.

The lad was in the cistern for only 15 to 20 minutes until he was found by his father. Artificial respiration by members of the Madoc detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police under the direction of Dr. S. R. Beatty, failed to revive the boy.

The boy had gone to the barn with his father and just as they were leaving for the store, the milk truck returned from the factory and Mr. Graham went to assist in dumping the whey.

While Mr. Graham was at the milk truck the boy disappeared and after a frantic 15 minute search he was found in the cistern in the pigpen. The father recovered the boy's body from the cistern and called the police and doctor.

MADOC KIWANIANS ENTERTAIN LADIES

A very enjoyable evening was held at Blue's Hotel on Friday evening last, as the Kiwanians were hosts to their ladies, for the first time in 1958. Over 75 Kiwanians and guests sat down to a delicious turkey dinner.

Guest speaker for the occasion was Mrs. D. I. MacKinnon, of Belleville, a Past President of the University Women's Club and presently Home Economics Director of the Poultry Products Institute of Ontario. Introduced by Mrs. Jean O'Riordan, Mrs. MacKinnon gave an excellent talk on the work done in Ontario and throughout Canada to increase the consumption of Poultry products by producing a much better type of poultry product and a much improved method of marketing. The speaker stated that during the past 10-15 years, the consumption of poultry products by Canadians had risen 7 lbs. per capita.

Past President Greg Murray very capably expressed the appreciation of the club to Mrs. MacKinnon.

A toast to the ladies was proposed by Senator Geo. S. White and responded to by Mrs. Carl Howse.

Special music was furnished by the Madoc High School Male Quartette accompanied by Miss Lamoine West.

Present for this occasion were Past Governor Jack and Evelyn Baker, of Montreal, and Lieutenant Governor Bill and Mrs. Carey, of Port Hope. Both spoke briefly.

WEDDING

AVEERY — McCAFFREY

A lovely double-ring wedding was solemnized on Saturday, May 17, at 2:30 p.m. in the Presbyterian Church, Madoc, when Margaret Anne McCaffrey, of Madoc, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCaffrey, of Madoc, became the bride of Cecil Rhodes Aveery, of Hartland, New Brunswick, son of Mrs. Guy McLaughlin. The Reverend R. D. MacLean, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville, officiated before a background of yellow snapdragons, mauve mums and ferns. The guest pews were designated with white satin bows, centred by a spray of apple blossoms.

Mrs. Wesley Hulin, church organist, presided at the console of the organ, and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Walter Armstrong, of Madoc, who sang "The Voice that Breathed O'er Eden," before the ceremony, and the "Wedding Prayer," during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, Mr. Robert McCaffrey, the bride was radiant in her waltz-length wedding gown, fashioned with fitted, lace bodice having short lace sleeves, and overskirt of white tulle over taffeta. She wore a coronet of seed pearls and sequins, shoulder-length veil of tulle illusion, and long, matching, lace mitts, and carried a semi-cascade bouquet of red garnet roses mingled with white stephanotis. A pearl necklace completed her ensemble.

Mrs. William Brenair, of Queensville, Ontario, as matron of honour, was gown in yellow nylon with long matching nylon gloves, matching headdress and white shoes. She carried a nosegay of mauve mums, centre by yellow roses.

Mr. Walter Grey, of Hartland, New Brunswick, attended his brother-in-law as groomsman, while Messrs. Murray Walker, of Marmora, and Mr. Robert McCaffrey, of Madoc, brother of the bride, ushered the guests.

The reception was held at the home of the bride, where a daintily appointed bride's table was centred by an all-white, three-tier wedding cake, topped by a miniature bride and bridegroom beneath an archway, and misted about the base with white tulle, enhanced with clusters of sweetpeas. Tall, white candles in silver candelabra, and the bridal bouquets added a delightful nuptial accent.

The guests were received by the bride's mother, wearing navy blue wool, fashioned on princess lines with picture hat in navy blue, white gloves, and red rose corsage.

The bridegroom's mother, attired in a gown of beige lace, with black picture hat having a frilled organza edge, pink pearl necklace and pink rose corsage, assisted in the receiving line.

For the wedding trip, by motor, to Niagara Falls and other points in New York State, the bride chose a mint-green dress with white stole, hat, shoes, gloves, and bag with corsage of red roses. Mr. and Mrs. Aveery will reside at Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, upon return.

Present from Newmarket, Hartland, N.B., Madoc, Edmundston, N.B., Marmora and Queensville, were many guests.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was the honoured guest at a miscellaneous sherry given by Mrs. Walter Baker, and by her fellow staff members of the Bell Telephone Company at Newmarket, when she was presented with a master and master of crystal.

ANNE HIRST

Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst:
I am 18, and hope to graduate this month. I have been having trouble with my parents. After school I do household chores at home, cleaning, cooking, etc. Then I like to go to my girl friend's house, or to a nearby confectionery store. My parents think this is wrong.

"I get home before 11 but they have come after me several times, and lately have forbidden me to go out at all. They think I'll get a bad name! Never in my life have I done things to be ashamed of, and I am tired and sick of this; something had better happen soon.

"Also, I am not allowed on dates, or at any social places where boys might be. What is the answer?"

DISCOURAGED

Unless your parents are oversolicitous, or regard you as a 14-year-old who can't be trusted, it is difficult to interpret their attitude. Why don't they allow you to meet nice boys? It is natural that they want to know where you are, but to shadow your footsteps and drag you home piously is humiliating.

Perhaps because you have got yourself in the habit of leaving home every night, you are in a dull rut. Why not encourage your girl friend to drop in at your house occasionally? It is too bad that there aren't others of your age to make up a group so you could have more fun. Incidentally, a nice girl isn't seen regularly at corner stores or other public haunts; it does her no good. On that, I agree with your mother.

I wonder whether she would care to write me herself? Perhaps I could give her a few ideas that would brighten your pattern of living. You three might have a happier life together, undisturbed by these differences.

Sit down with your mother and father and ask them frankly why they forbid you to date boys. There must be some in your neighborhood whose families they know? A girl 18, about to graduate, should surely conduct herself properly, and be entertaining friends in her own home.

Don't be antagonistic in your attitude, though I understand the temptation; talk quietly, and let them see how much you want to cooperate. I hope you will be enjoying yourself soon, and with your parents' approval.

"Dear Anne Hirst:

I dated a young man for nearly a year, and loved him so much I finally promised to marry him soon. (That would have been within a month.) But one night he didn't behave himself, and I sent him away without saying why.

"Shouldn't I have explained? Can I now? We had never had any quarrels about anything! I am so confused (and so lonely) that I don't know the right thing to do. What is it?"

JACQUELINE

Nothing.
The young man knows why he was dismissed. If he had really loved you he would have begged your forgiveness and given his word that you could trust him completely. Certainly he would not have allowed a month to pass without trying to make amends. A man in love can make a mistake, but if he is sincerely sorry he never offends again. You will not want to believe me, but I'm afraid he would have found some excuse to avoid marriage. I am so sorry! It is a devastating shock to realize he did not deserve your love.

Difference between parents and their daughters disturb a family's happiness. Anne Hirst has been able to explain the generations to each other, and will try to help. Write her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ontario.

Modern Etiquette

by Roberta Lee

Q. My husband and I took some guests for an auto ride recently, and I sat in the front seat with my husband, our guests in the rear. I have been told this was wrong. Was it?

A. Yes. You should have asked one of your guests to sit in front, while you sat in the back with the others.

Q. If one is eating in a restaurant where small butter pats are served in little paper containers, is it all right to let the knife rest on the pat when not in use?

A. Never. The knife, when not in use, should rest along the upper right part of the plate — and never, of course, with the handle of the knife resting on the table.

The sisters, 28, separated when Soviet troops marched into their native Poland 13 years ago, said they would be reunited as soon as they could raise the money. Sophie, who works as a draftsman in Hialeah, Fla., recently learned from an aunt in Warsaw that Alexandra was living in the States.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

by Gwendoline P. Clarke

If you are not interested in Women's Institute work don't bother to read this column because it is almost entirely about the W.I. You see I was at Guelph last week to the Officers' Conference—not as an official delegate but as a newsman, picking up little bits here and there to pass on to you in this column. Not a full report by any means—that I leave for the district director of your own particular branch. I have no doubt she will come back with—and be able to pass on to you—a new enthusiasm for our wonderful organization which, to my way of thinking, has no equal. It is the one organization which brings together urban and rural members, helping each to understand the problems of the other. At one time the W.I. membership was comprised almost entirely of farm women, centered around problems of specific interest to those living and working on terms and in farm homes. Now the picture has changed. Advantages of farm women have become more varied and progressive, in fact many of their interests are very little different from those living in urban districts. W.I. programs and projects have kept pace with the changing times, embracing extra topics: cultural, educational and political. The W.I. helps all women of rural and urban to become more civic and urban to become more rural, and through this to put to rest the old-time rivalry.

Every time I write of the W.I. I am amazed at the difference between the W.I. of today and the W.I. of 13 years ago. No longer is it a group of women who meet to discuss the problems of rural life, but a group of women who meet to discuss the problems of the world. The W.I. is no longer a group of women who meet to discuss the problems of rural life, but a group of women who meet to discuss the problems of the world. The W.I. is no longer a group of women who meet to discuss the problems of rural life, but a group of women who meet to discuss the problems of the world.

It was the first time many of the members had had a chance to see and hear our new FWIC National President, Mrs. Keith Rand. Easy, charming and completely unaffected, she spoke to the members as one woman to another, understanding their problems, helping and inspiring them to greater interest in the work of the W.I. as a whole.

Now to summarize I want especially to draw your attention to one fact. That while W.I. activities have as their primary objective ways and means to help farm women yet the topics discussed are, or should be, of interest to all women rural and urban. And education, health, and a good many other things, out the Conference "The Challenge of Tomorrow" and emphasizing the fact that homemaking is more important than good house-keeping.

Other speakers and topics discussed were "Safety in the Home and on the Farm" by Mr. H. E. Belman, Bruce County, who said that most accidents are the result of carelessness, ignorance and indifference to the safety of others—as, for instance, shoes and boxes left on stairs for other people to trip over. Damage and total casualties from common accidents in any one year, said Mr. Belman, is usually greater than that suffered from tornadoes and floods. Tractors and farm machinery were the greatest hazard and the most common cause group in accidents was among drivers and riders of from ten to fourteen! Isn't that staggering?

Reports were also given on such projects as "Auxiliary Classes for public school children, Maternal Care and Infant Mortality, T.V. and Radio Evaluations, Women Around the World in Picture and Story, presented by Mrs. Hugh Summers, World Vice-President of the ACWW, taken during last year's Tri-Annual Conference.

A. Heaven to lighten what might have been too much serious discussion there were excellent solo. But what really brought the house down was the Golden W.I. Orchestra comprised of ten women, charmingly dressed in century-old costumes. One who, a pianist, one an excellent violinist; another played a guitar while the fourth kept time on a washboard with tin rattles. Their selections were lively old-time musical numbers; their performance so good they were called back again and again.

Now to something I must mention. On display were some lovely china cups and saucers meant specially for W.I. enthusiasts. Good china, cups a nice shape tall enough to keep the tea hot, show I like those, low the saucers. Design in blue and gold, the gold maple leaves on a white background, gold handle and edge and the W.I. crest on the cup and in the centre of the saucer. The only place where they are sold is Guelph and they are going like hot cakes. A nice gift for a special speaker or to any W.I. member as a token gift.

Now to summarize I want especially to draw your attention to one fact. That while W.I. activities have as their primary objective ways and means to help farm women yet the topics discussed are, or should be, of interest to all women rural and urban. And education, health, and a good many other things, out

Real Book-Worms

Friends of a man living in Indiana thought that he was just another book collector. They were never invited to examine his collection, so they were amazed recently to learn that when he handed the books over to a university they were valued at five million dollars.

Bookworms say that despite the rival attractions of television, radio and films, book collecting is as popular as ever, although rare books worth millions are harder to find than they were in Victorian days.

The possessor of a book which is believed to be unique was anxious to hear that another copy of the book had turned up in a second-hand bookshop in Paris. He spent $90 to acquire it, Paris, bought the book for $3,000 and threw it into the fire so that his own copy might remain unvalued.

Machinists, a librarian and bookworm of Florence, lived, ate, drank and slept among his books. His house was the end—cramped from floor to ceiling with volumes. The only place one could walk in his house was the narrow passage left between the books. Even the porch and stairways were crammed tight.

This strange man always slept on a bed of books. He covered himself with an "eiderdown" of large, soft-bound volumes.

Seaman's Slang Stumps Lawyer

When it's a galley. Almost everything on board a ship has a different name from its equivalent ashore. Floors are decks, heads, and the walls are bulkheads.

Why should this be? Well, galleys are galleys simply because that's what they've been called for centuries. That's why companionways are staircases, and ports are windows. Seamen are responsible for having handed down this jargon from another age.

A seaman who appeared as a witness in court was asked by a lawyer: "Where exactly was the defendant when you first saw him?"

The sailor looked blank: "I'm sorry sir—I don't understand. What's the defendant?"

With heavy sarcasm the lawyer asked the court to explain the meaning of the term. Then said: "Now perhaps you can answer my question."

"Oh yes, sir," rejoined the sailor brightly, "he was on Monkey Island."

"Yes, sir, just about the bin-nacle."

"Please be more explicit," snapped the lawyer, beginning to redden as titters rippled round the court.

"It was over the after end of the bridge—you know sir—just on the fore side of the fidley," explained the sailor—getting his own back with a vengeance.

"Order! Order in court!" called the usher as soon as he could control his own laughter.

A few seamen have sense enough to take steps to simplify these nautical terms for the benefit of the uninitiated. The west country barge, for instance, who has to call on his wife to steer when working through narrow rivers takes extra precautions.

Realizing that "port," "starboard," and "amidships" mean nothing to her, he places a bucket on one side, a broom on the other, and the coal shovel from the galley in the middle.

"Hard a bucket!" he calls, and the helm is put unhesitatingly to "hard-a-starboard."

"Hard a broom!" and over goes the helm to "port."

tural activities, all are of interest to women everywhere. Remember that if you are tempted to resign from the W.I. because you no longer live on a farm. Intermingling of town and country women is essential to a better understanding of both.

"Galley shovel!" Back goes the helm to "amidships."

There are good reasons for all of these nautical nicknames.

Why should men be referred to as "hands"? Another little story in this connection concerns the seaman who was on the carpet charged for being late on watch.

"The boy who came down to the mess-deck to waken the watch shook all hands but me," he stated in self-defence.

The boy to whom the remark referred, a newcomer to seafaring, promptly blurted indignantly, "Excuse me, sir—I never shook hands with anybody!"

A ship never "moves," she "gets under way." If she is not "under way," she is "lying" somewhere. Lying at anchor in a river she is said to be "in the stream."

There was an occasion when a British warship paid a "show the flag" visit to New York. Two of her crew were enjoying a drink in a bar on 12th Avenue.

"Hiya boys," was the friendly greeting of a burly American. "Where's your ship lying?" asked the Yankee.

Casually one replied, "She's lying out in the stream."

There was a long ominous silence.

"Say bud," said the American, "the Hudson River rises the other side of the Catskill Mountains, over 300 miles from here. At Tappan Bay it's five miles wide. The first successful steamboat was operated by Fulton on this same Hudson River. 150 miles of it is navigable. Even your Queen Mary can come in here at any state of the tide. This river serves the biggest concentration of shipping in the world. Son—Is your ship still lying in the stream?"

And she was.

MY BOUNCY BUDDY—This straw-hatted beach ball only has eyes for Candi Scott—and with good reason. The painted-on smile is nothing to the real one Candi flashes at the photo.

FOO ON YOU—Barbara Barnes, 17, shows a Mexican rain god how the people of the area feel about his product. The ugly little figure, a relic of the Zootopia culture of Western Mexico, may be more to blame for locally heavy downpours than what the weatherman refers to as a frontal occlusion.

Dial Telephones In The Country

It suddenly occurred to me today that the rural telephone has again become a worthy subject of contemplation, although in different ways. This came to mind as the result of asking for University 5-2222. The operator, who has long since ceased to be a near neighbor and a close friend, is a distant voice in some unknown place, and she asked pleasantly, "And where is that?"

The ancient rural lines have been dialized, you see. And as the dial systems extended themselves into the remoter regions, all these synthetic exchanges have been thought up and foisted upon us. There is no such place, of course, as University 5.

But there used to be a pleasant little community known as Freeport — about 15 miles from us and a town we occasionally call. In its earlier days this may have been a free port, whereas other waterfront localities charged wharfage, but the local legend is that the town was named for Sir Andrew Freeport in the Spectator Papers of Addison and Steele. This is a pretty little legend, and deserves our support. We should not lightly daily with a town so charmingly named.

The number we used to call most of all was Freeport 124-35, which meant three long rings and five short — a merry snatch of jingling worth the ten cents the call cost. But what became of all that?

It says if you look up the number you will save time, so we look up the number, dial the operator, and say, "University 5-2222." The operator then asks, "And where is that?"

If I am not in a hurry and desire to reprimand the telephone company for compounding an absurdity, I say, "I don't know." This is mean of me and I ought to be ashamed of myself, for I know very well it is exactly the same thing as the old number, Freeport 124-35. I hesitate to say "I don't know" every time, because one night I got connected with a woman in Cambridge, Massachusetts, where there is also an exchange named University, and I had a time getting rid of her.

I think there is another University out West, for another time I talked with a man in Alpena, Michigan. "Hello," I said. "Is this Snookums?" He said it was not.

Of course, deep in the telephone company is a man who could explain why UN-5 connects you with Freeport, and why UN-3 connects you with Cambridge, and he might even explain that there really is a university in Cambridge if you know where to look. But there is no university in Freeport. So it goes.

Bath is now Hilltop, and Bath sits on tidewater. Brunswick is now Park View, although neither park nor view will entrance the sight-seer much.

There is a presumption on the part of the telephone company when they set up an artificial exchange for a well-known and trusty town of long standing, and then ask the customer to identify it. I made a call recently to L.O.Cust something or other, and the operator said, "Where is that?" I said, honestly, "I don't know. L.O.Cust is a name your company postulated for its own purposes, and I cannot bound it or describe its natural assets. I do not know if it makes shoes or packs fish. It might be east of Eggmoggin Beach, and it might be part of Pripet or Bass Harbor. It is somewhere in Maine."

FRENCH RIOT IN ALGIERS—Rioters overturn a car during violent demonstrations in Algiers in protest against any compromise in the struggle with Algerian rebels. A mob of more than 50,000 French men and women gathered in a square while young rioters stormed the U.S. Cultural Center and occupied the French Civil Government headquarters.

"Do you know what it's near?" she asked.

"I think it's near Prospect, Mystic, and Triangle," I said.

I was immediately connected with a downtown St. Louis number and the baby sitter said Mr. and Mrs. Foster were out for the evening and would be home late. I can explain how this happens, for I am a student of such things. The operator, not knowing one University from another, makes a buzz and gets connected with a route specialist. She says, "Route, please, to Harvest-5." Then the other operator says, "Boston 125, plus 2-L, plus, etc." The "2-L" means two letters, which is why they capitalize twice on all exchanges. It is just as easy, therefore, to get a wrong number in Denver as it is to get a right one in L.O.Cust.

I resent very much when the operator implies that I ought to know where these exchanges are. I think SHE ought to know, or that the man who made the things up ought to be kept on 24-hour duty so he can tell her.

True, telephone service has been much improved and the rates are healthy and strong. But when I meet a man on the train and we begin to talk, and we find we have common interests, and he says, "Here is my number, call me up when you have a hen hot, and I'll send you some goose eggs." I can put his number in my pocket without having any idea where he lives.

When I have a setting hen I dial the operator and say, "Rust-free 7-2345." So she says, "Where is that?" I do not know, so I say I do not know. This makes me queer to the operator, who is a rational person and assumes that anybody making a call will have some idea as to its destination. "Is that in Maine?" she says.

I don't know if it's in Maine or Costa Rica, to tell the truth. Rust-free is a telephone company place, and has nothing to do with me, goose eggs, hot hens, or rationality. "For all I know, it's in Timbuctoo," I say.

"Where is Timbuctoo?" she says. —by John Gould in The Christian Science Monitor.

How Can I?

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I remove the colored letters from empty foil sacks?

A. Rub pure lard thoroughly into the letters and figures, soak in lukewarm water for a few days, then put in the boiler with soap flakes and boil. This treatment will remove all the lettering.

Q. How can I soften egg shells?

A. By putting the eggs in vinegar for about twenty-four hours, longer if necessary.

Q. How can I dry a sweater properly after washing?

A. Lay the sweater on a flat surface, turning from time to time. It will not stretch and will be soft when dry.

Q. How can I prevent the rusting of mattress springs?

A. Rub the springs occasionally with a cloth dipped into melted paraffin, and they will never rust.

Q. How can I make a rubber hot-water bottle last longer?

A. It will last twice as long if the steam is pressed out before inserting the stopper, if it is never filled more than two-thirds, and never with boiling water, and when not in use, the bag is hung with opening downwards.

Pilots Bale Out In Sealed Capsules

A pilot of a Super Sabre ripping through the thin atmosphere at 42,000 feet hears a shattering explosion behind him. His machine bucks and pitches like a mustang, flames lick along the fuselage — a jet engine has exploded and by ordinary standards this should be the end of him, him, for an utterly hostile world awaits him outside the plastic canopy when he bales out.

The air is only one-sixth the density at sea-level. Sudden exposure to the reduced pressure can cause severe internal injury. And as the oxygen content is far below the amount necessary to sustain life, unconsciousness and death would follow.

The temperature outside his pressurized cabin is below zero, cold enough to freeze an unprotected person in a few minutes. At his speed of 600 m.p.h., sudden exposure to wind-blast would almost certainly prove fatal. Even if he clears the "plane" and survives the slipstream, his life will be endangered by the tumbling and spinning which will offset the blood away from the heart as he plummets down. All the odds are overwhelmingly against him.

But thanks to modern science, he is surrounded by life-saving aids. Charles Coombs points out in a fascinating survey of up-to-the-minute flying techniques, "Survival in the Sky." All he has to do is "follow the drill."

Almost without thinking he has closed his throttle, shut off fuel flow, switched off electrical circuits in preparation for automatic ejection.

Balancing the arms of his seat jettisons the plastic canopy over his head. Instantly he is exposed to the forces of the outside atmosphere. The mask leaps away from his face as reduced pressure causes his lungs to expand, but quickly settles back. Decompression triggers the mechanism of his skin-tight nylon flying suit, high-pressure oxygen shoots through the limp bladder, pumping above his nose, his ears, and as they fill the suit engulfs him with an artificial measure that the thin atmosphere doesn't provide.

Now he braces his body and head against the seat's back rest, presses a trigger and both he and the seat are shot into the air. The flaming tail of the "plane" flashes past beneath him, the streamer snags in a moment his helmet and he starts tumbling.

Then the pilot detaches himself from the seat and for nearly two minutes "free-falls" down through 30,000 feet.

At 12,000 feet, when the denser air has lessened his descent to about 130 m.p.h., within the safety limits for parachute opening, a device in his parachute pack, triggered by the higher pressure, releases the parachute and he drifts safely down to earth.

A miracle of life-saving science, indeed. But Coombs records even more advanced methods. Future aircraft will operate at extremely high altitudes, and the pilot may then have to bale out at supersonic speeds in a sealed capsule.

Several have been devised and tested on dummies dropped from planes flying at various speeds and heights, others are being prepared. One design is made of light, strong honeycomb fiberglass. The pilot, wearing a parachute and survival gear, sits partly inside the capsule in his usual seat. It has clamshell-like doors which open and close rather like a parrot's beak.

Apart from baling out, many other modern wonders are described in a book that will particularly engross all air-minded youth eager to understand or play a part in our supersonic future.

Starlings Taken For Enemy Planes

New experiments with supersonic sound devices inaudible to the human ear were made recently in vain attempts to break up enormous flocks of starlings, often numbering 25,000, which roost nightly on tall buildings in London and some midland cities. The birds have become a serious nuisance.

Stuffed owls were also used to try to scare the winged invaders. The starlings were not deceived; they knew the owls were faked. Many showed their contempt by perching on them.

The starling population has been soaring since the end of the war. The rate of increase has amazed ornithologists. One flock which flew over a south country village was so large that some villagers at first thought it was a fleet of enemy aircraft and told the local constable.

Massed flights of thousands of starlings have become one of the modern "sights" of London. They settle on the ledges of big buildings at dusk after manoeuvring in the sky with extraordinary precision.

Some experts describe the cheerful starling as a roistering swagger among birds. It loves man's company and can adapt its habits to life in modern cities. The starling is also a clever mimic, stealing phrases from blackbirds, curlews, lapwings and many others and often imitating mechanical sounds such as the tinkling of a bell.

CURFEW SHALL NOT TOLL

The Dodger rookie, brought up in a hurry to alleviate a pitching shortage, pulled into town at three in the morning. Since his orders were to report immediately to the manager, he asked the night clerk for Uncle Robbie's room and went up and knocked on the manager's door.

After a long interval, Robbie opened the door. His hair was tousled, his eyes, half-closed. "Who are you?" he yawned.

"I'm the new ball player from Minneapolis."

Robbie yawned. But he kept control. "What an odd, he thought, but I might as well have some fun with him."

"Looze, son," he said, "I want you to report to every player on the floor. Then come back and tell me what they said to you."

The kid left. A half hour later he was back.

"Well," Robbie said, "what did they say to you?"

"Nothing," the rookie replied. "What do you mean?" snapped Robbie.

"Mr. Robinson," the rookie said, "nobody is in yet!"

ROE ON RYE

The venerable Preacher Roe had a dry sense of humor to go along with his wide assortment of "stuff", and could handle any situation that came along. One afternoon the Phillips started belaboring him. They scored four times in the first inning and were bouncing hits all over the outfield in the second, when catcher Al Lopez called time.

Lopez plodded to the mound and asked, "Feeling all right, Preach?"

Roe deliberated a moment. "Waaaaa," he drawled, "I ain't got no pain—I ain't got no fatigue—and, by golly, I ain't got a thing on the ball!"

MADOC MINISTER NAMED QUINTE CONFERENCE HEAD

Rev. J. F. Lane was elected president of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada on the second ballot this week. Mr. Lane succeeded Rev. W. F. Banister of Kingston.

Mr. Lane, Rev. N. D. Patterson, of Peterborough, and Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt, of Oshawa, were nominated for the presidency.

Dr. Patterson was eliminated on the first ballot.

Other officers elected were: Secretary, Rev. K. J. Crawford, Ipperden; treasurer, Rev. J. E. Glover, Marmora; statistician, Frank L. Weldon, Lindsay; Archivist, Mr. Weldon, Lindsay.

Rev. D. F. Summers, Carleton Place, press representative, Rev. H. J. Banister, to the deaconess order and McAvoy, Kingston, and the representative of the women workers, Rev. G. S. Maxwell, of Peterborough.

Mr. Crawford, Mr. Glover, Mr. Weldon, Mr. Summers and Mr. Maxwell held the same positions last year.

In the address, retiring President Dr. Banister said that the presbyteries have several responsibilities.

"It is up to the presbyteries to further the religious education in the boys and girls work," he said.

"In most of our presbyteries meetings there is not enough time for feeding our souls. Presbyteries should meet one more time during the year for meditation and one hour of the meeting should go towards theological study."

Punctuation — Then And Now

Until quite lately I took the punctuation marks which guide our reading pretty much for granted, as something that had always been and always would be. I noted a few deviations. I knew they had once been called points and that another expression for period was full stop. I knew the last century used more commas than we do.

I was aware that the English in their queer way called our quotes, inverted commas, and I knew also that the Spanish put a question mark before, as well as after, the question, inverting the first one, a most sensible procedure which tells you a question is a question when you most want to know it—before you start to read it.

But lately I have been noticing larger things.

The first of these was that punctuation marks are cannibalistic. They feed on each other, making new marks out of old. Take that question mark which the Spanish put before as well as after the question. It's the semicolon used as a question mark in medieval Greek manuscripts, dismembered and reassembled with the period on the bottom and the comma turned around and put on top. The comma itself is a virgule (the slanting stroke you sometimes see between and, or thusly — and/or) decapitated and twisted into a curve.

But that's nothing to the jolt I got when I learned that our ancestors used punctuation marks not as we do, to make clear, grammatical structure, but as reading rests to indicate how long the reader should pause at a given place. In the 18th-century "Young Ladies' and Gentlemen's Spelling Book" I came across a table of these rests, here called stops, marks and pauses:

A comma (,) is a pause in reading until you may tell one.
A semicolon (;) two;
A colon (:) three;
A period (.) four.

Thus you read, and still read, for this is the punctuation of the Bible. "The Lord is my Shepherd (count, or tell, two); I shall not want (count four). He maketh me to lie down in green pastures (count three); he leadeth me beside the still waters (count four)."

Webster in his famous spelling book changed the count a bit here. He told our great-grandfathers to count four, not three, for a colon; six, not four, for a period. Being a sensible Nutmeg Yankee, he wanted to slow things down.

This makes punctuation much easier than our modern system—no grammar, no comma splices. All you have to know is how to rest. All you have to do is count.

My next discovery was note of admiration, which I first came upon in the "The New-York Speller," of 1819. Like note of interrogation, for question mark, it had the old wordy formality in it and the Latin which we are getting further and further away from.

Our grandies also played with punctuation. I found three points dramatized in an old rebus which runs like this:

If the B mt put:
If the B. putting:
Don't put: over a der
You'd be an * it.

Translated, this rebus, which once adorned many a sampler and pot-holder, reads thusly:
If the grate be empty, put coal on.

If the grate be full, stop putting coal on.
Don't put coal on over a high fender.

You'd be an ass to risk it.
Great-granddad was a busy man, as the song tells us, but he knew a colon from a full stop, a great er capital B from a small one, a hyphen from an asterisk, and he probably knew that the last was Greek for small star, to boot.

But those who come closest to the marks of punctuation are the ones who have the most fun with them—the printers. They have put the melodrama of the exclamation point into several phrases. They call it shriek, astonisher, screamer, scare point, and strike 'em stiff, all image-making terms of high voltage for a mark hated by Swift for its exuberance. In their efforts to season monotonously with interest, they call the question mark the wonder mark and parentheses finger nails, thinking of the cuttings, no doubt.

Once you're in it, you find that the story of punctuation, like that of most human interests, is inexhaustible and not without its humor. Like capitalization, it is part of the old-time learnin'-songs, which began with Great A and ended with grotesque Izzard and Ampersand:
Great A, little a,
Bouncing B,
The cat's in the cupboard
And she can't see.

If you want any more you can swing it yourself.—By Horace Reynolds in The Christian Science Monitor.

It's How We Live That Counts

At least one-third of all man's illnesses, from the common cold to cancer, may now be traced scientifically to the patient's environment and how well he adapts to it.

This concept of disease was presented by Dr. Lawrence E. Hinkle Jr. of New York at a meeting of the American College of Physicians in Atlantic City, N.J. Its basis was a seven-year Cornell Medical Center study covering some 3,000 persons (American working men and women, Chinese graduate students, American college graduates, and Hungarian refugees). In each of these contrasting groups, said Dr. Hinkle, was found the same sickness pattern: 25 per cent of the men and women studied accounted for 50 per cent of the total illness for each group.

The great majority of the disease incidents came in "clusters," Dr. Hinkle said, at times when the members of every group found their life situations and environments "threatening, unsatisfying, over-demanding, productive of conflict . . . against which conditions they could make no satisfactory adaptation." In general, the conditions involved "disturbed relations with family members or business associates, threats to security and status, and restrictions and limitations which made it impossible for them to satisfy important needs and drives."

The disease episodes were not minor. They ran the gamut of "major, irreversible, life-endangering illnesses." About 50 to 60 per cent were upper-respiratory disease; 20 per cent affected the gastrointestinal tract. But any body function regulated by the central nervous system might be influenced by the patient's unfavorable reaction to environment, Dr. Hinkle suggested.

In some cases, changes of environment and of unsatisfactory life situations might help. But in the end, Dr. Hinkle thinks, it is the patient's ability to adjust to his situation that will best combat disease. "Ultimately," he said, "medicine will have to take account of this in the treatment of illness. In view of the complexities involved . . . these efforts will be difficult, time-consuming, and not at first highly rewarding. Nevertheless, the problem of the patient's relation to his environment stands before us as a stern challenge to medicine, and not as an easy opportunity." —From NEWSWEEK

Jane Andrews

When you try the following recipe—originally from Europe—please remember that all honey cakes require a few days to ripen and it must also be noted that in the final stages of baking the oven temperature should be lowered because honey cakes scorch very easily.

HONEY CAKE

1 cup honey
6 egg whites
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup brown sugar
6 egg yolks
2 1/2 cups sifted cake flour
2 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 cup milk

Bring honey to a boil and then cool it. Beat egg whites until stiff.

In another bowl, cream butter and sugar until light, add egg yolks and beat until fluffy, add honey and beat well.

Sift flour, soda, salt and cinnamon twice and add to the mixture alternately with the milk. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and pour into greased tube pan. Bake 45 minutes over 350 F. Reduce heat to 300 F. and bake 15 minutes longer.

Cool cake for a short while before removing from pan. Let ripen 24 hours or longer before serving.

RHUBARB CHIFFON PIE

(Yield—about 8 servings)

1 cup quick-cooking rolled oats
1/2 cup lightly packed brown sugar
1/2 cup butter, melted
1/2 cup cut-up flaked or shredded coconut
3/4 cups chopped rhubarb
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1 pint (1 1/2 cups) whipping cream

Preheat oven to 375 degrees (moderately hot). Measure rolled oats into a shallow pan and place in preheated oven to toast, 5 to 10 minutes.

Mix in brown sugar, melted butter and coconut. Pack crumble firmly into bottom and sides of a pie plate (9 inches, top inside measure). Chill until firm.

Prepare rhubarb and place in in saucepan; add 1/4 cup of the water and 1/2 cup of the granulated sugar.

Cover and cook until barely tender—remove 1/4 cup of the rhubarb pieces.

Cook remaining fruit until tender—8 to 10 minutes longer. Combine gelatin and the remaining 1/4 cup water, add to rhubarb and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Cool until partially set.

Beat whipping cream until stiff; beat in the remaining 1/4 cup granulated sugar. Fold in rhubarb mixture and turn into prepared pie shell.

Garnish top of pie with the saved-out partially cooked fruit. Chill until set.

POTATO SCONES

(Yield 16 triangular scones)

1 1/2 cups sour cream
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
Few grains ground mace
1/4 cup butter
1 1/2 teaspoons baking soda
1/2 cup cold mashed potato
1/2 cup lukewarm water

1 teaspoon granulated sugar
1 envelope active dry yeast
3 cups (about) once-sifted all-purpose flour.

Scald sour cream; stir in salt, the 2 tablespoons sugar, mace, butter and baking soda.

Mash potato with a fork until very smooth; gradually stir in the sour cream mixture and cool to lukewarm.

Meantime, measure lukewarm water into a large bowl; stir in the 1 teaspoon sugar.

Sprinkle with yeast. Let stand 10 minutes, then stir well. Stir in lukewarm sour cream mixture and 1 1/2 cups of the flour; beat until smooth and elastic.

Stir in sufficient additional flour to make a soft dough—about 1 1/2 cups more.

Turn out on floured board or canvas and knead until smooth and elastic. Place in a greased bowl. Grease top. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk—about 1 1/2 hours.

Punch down dough. Turn out on lightly floured board or canvas and knead until smooth.

Divide dough into 4 equal portions. Roll out each portion into a thin round, 9 inches in diameter; dust with flour.

Cut each round into 4 triangular scones.

Place, well apart, on lightly floured cookie sheets. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk—about 45 minutes.

Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 degrees, about 15 minutes. Serve hot or reheated.

Studied Evenings To Learn Forgery

Counterfeiters are queer people. Melvin G. Parsons, a fifty-seven-year-old foundry moulder of Missouri, laid on his own "evening classes." He studied engraving, inks and printing at a public library for hundreds of evenings, then in three years forged $14,000 worth of perfect $10 bills, but gave them such painstaking care and costly finishes that he barely met expenses.

"I didn't make any money out of it," he told a secret service agent, "but like horse-racing it gets in your blood, and I couldn't get away from it." The agent said: "He was trying to produce better money than the Treasury Department."

One U.S. counterfeiter was a Roman Catholic who victimized only priests of his church. Pious, penitent, he wandered around the country offering $50 and $100 bills for special prayers of which, he said, he was in great need.

The priests readily took his notes and gave him change, and the notes stayed in circulation longer than usual because the churches had no difficulty in passing them!

One counterfeiter was a Louisiana justice of the peace who, in 1908, set up an efficient plant in an unused room of his court. Culprits paying fines were lectured sternly on their misdeeds—and given counterfeit change!

In a fascinating account of some of the world's most notorious cases—"Money of Their Own"—Murray Teigh Bloom says that a few forgers do escape despite a U.S. Secret Service estimate that at least ninety per cent are caught and sentenced.

The half-rouble notes of a Russian gang, in 1912, were excellent reproductions, except that on one side, in tiny characters, was this challenge to the Tsar's treasury: "Our money is no worse than yours."

A Milanese counterfeiter, in 1951, turned out fairly good U.S. $10 notes, but in the usual promise on the face, "Redeemable in lawful money," the engraver deliberately omitted the first "l" from "lawful!"

The $100 notes of the Ramirez brothers of Mexico were only fair technically, and probably wouldn't have passed any sober bank cashier. They were intended only for use by bootleggers, to pay off suppliers beyond the three-mile limit—and on a pitching boat on a moonless night they always passed. Later, when they were found to be fake, how could the supplier complain, and to whom?

But in time some of the wiser ones hired bank tellers for a week-end's work at sea, checking the pay-off money.

Marcus Crahan, a Providence, U.S., photo-engraver, disposed of most of his home-made notes at race tracks around the country. As soon as he reached a city he put a personal notice in a leading paper on these lines: "Found in Union Station late yesterday afternoon, a sum of money in bank notes, which owner may have, after proving property, by applying to X-18 this paper."

Thus, when he was eventually caught, he could say he found the fake notes, instead of making the lame excuse that he got them from bank or store. Once or twice this succeeded, but the third time it landed him a fifteen-year sentence.

Edward Windeyer, ex-fisherman, ex-mechanic, ex-watchmaker living in a suburb of Sydney, Australia, made this do-it-yourself confession recently: "I thought I would have a go at making some $10 notes. I went to the library and to the bookshop and read about printing and engraving for six months, then I bought some ammonium bichromate, gum arabic, pumice powder, some nitric acid, and other things. I also got some sheet zinc and tubes of water colours and some typing paper, photographic film . . . and so on.

He passed 350 of his notes at night trotting races and greyhound meetings, and was dubbed by the newspapers "Mr. One by One" because he was careful never to pass more than three or four in a day.

To avoid having to carry the notes about until he really needed them, he mailed himself letters in the different cities he visited. After he was caught and given seven years' hard labour in 1953, the detective inspector on the case said:

"This man's work, developed in a few months from an almost complete lack of photography knowledge, shows what can be done if one has the determination."

Taxis Of Death

A New York taxi was recently taking a man and a woman to a police station. When the taxi arrived, astonished police officers found both passengers dead. The man had a pistol and a commando knife in his belt, and a bullet in his head; the woman, his wife, had died of bullet wounds in the head and neck.

Another tragic taxi was that taken by a woman to Beachy Head last autumn. On arrival she told the driver to wait for her, but she never came back. They found her body on a ledge 500 feet below.

Remember the "Cleft Chin" murder, when an American soldier and a British woman were sentenced in January, 1945, for murdering and robbing a London taxi driver?

After they had been sentenced and removed from court, the judge told the jury that the same pair had some time previously held up another taxi. But on that occasion the passenger was an American officer who promptly drew his revolver and the couple fled.

FRIGHTENING—Cathren Santa Maria, a big-eared basset hound, doesn't like the looks of that hypodermic needle. An antirabies drive brought out the dread instrument.

Dates and Prunes Are Sure-Fire Dessert Hits

BY DOROTHY MADDOX

Like dates and prunes in desserts? If you do, you'll enjoy these two very good recipes.

Date-Brownie Pudding (8-10 servings)

Three squares unsweetened chocolate, 2 tablespoons shortening, 1 cup sifted flour, 2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup sugar, 2 1/2 cups milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1/2 cup chopped dates, 1/2 cup chopped nut meats, 2 cups water, 1 1/4 cups sugar, 1 square unsweetened chocolate.

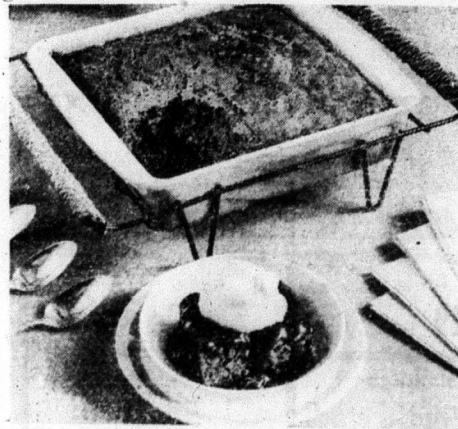

Melt 3 squares of chocolate and shortening together. Cool. Sift flour, measure, add baking powder, salt and 1/2 cup sugar and sift again. Add milk and vanilla.

Mix until smooth. Stir in cooled chocolate mixture, dates and nuts. Pour into greased 8x8x2-inch pan. Cream water, 1 1/4 cups sugar and 1 square chocolate in saucepan.

Place over medium heat and stir until sugar is dissolved and chocolate is melted. Bring to a boil. Pour over top of batter. (This makes a chocolate sauce in bottom of pan after pudding is baked.) Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 40 to 45 minutes.

Calif. ork. Vineyard Pie (1 1/2-inch pie)

One and one-half cups cooked prunes, 1/4 cup peck or cherry

Whipped cream tops this delicious date-brownie pudding. Look good? It is, and easy to make, too!

wine or water, 1/4 cup orange juice, 1 teaspoon grated orange rind, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1/2 cup prune cooking liquid, 1/2 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 2 tablespoons cold water, pastry for 8-inch crust and strip top.

Pit prunes and cut in halves. Arrange in a 9x9-lined pie pan. Combine wine, orange juice and rind, lemon juice, prune liquid, sugar and butter and heat to boiling. Add cornstarch mixed with water and cook and stir until mixture boils and is thick. Pour over the prunes. Cover pie with strips of pastry. Bake about 25 minutes in a hot oven (425 degrees F.).

Besides the large number of floats, decorated cars, clowns, etc., there will be three bands in the procession: the Madoc Brass Band, the High School Cadet Band and the Havelock Pipe Band.

The parade which is scheduled to get underway at 10 a.m. will be headed by a former Madocer, Mrs. Joan DeMarcy, of Ottawa. Mrs. DeMarcy is the former Joan Kincaid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benson Kincaid and granddaughter of Mr. Archie Kincaid. Mrs. DeMarcy, who was born in Madoc, is a graduate of East York Collegiate and a former student at Ryerson College where she instructed and coached the Baton Twirling Corps. She recently purchased the Edwin Feeney Model Agency in Ottawa and teaches classes in Baton twirling, as well as in modelling.

It is expected that nearly every place of business in Madoc will be represented with floats in the parade.

SIMEON H. FOX, ROAD SUPT., DIES

Former County Road Superintendent and active in the municipal life of Hastings for many years, Simeon Henry Fox, 312 Bridge Street East, died in the Belleville General Hospital late Thursday evening after an illness which had extended for several months.

He was born at Eldorado, 80 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Fox and had resided all of his life in the county, coming to Belleville twenty-four years ago. Mr. Fox was educated in his native community and in early life had a flare for municipal politics. At an early age he entered the Madoc Township council and served for many years, eventually being elected reeve and attended County Council. He always had a great interest in roads and road building and served on the Roads and Bridges committee of the council. Later he was appointed Road Superintendent for the county and for many years served in that capacity both to council and the ratepayers of the county.

Mr. Fox was highly regarded by his associates and the firms with which he dealt in his profession. He was well liked by the men serving under him in the county and was able to maintain a good liaison between his committee and the members of the council. On his retirement after 23 years of service, he was signally honoured by county council members and associates. In his social life he was well known and enjoyed a wide circle of friends, who will sincerely regret his death.

He was a member of Bridge Street United Church and when health permitted was an active participant in the work of the congregation. For many years he served as a member of the Official Board. Fraternally he was a life member of Madoc Lodge, A.F. & A.M., No. 48 and also a life member of Eldorado L.O.L. Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Gerald (Dorothy) Brignell, at home; son, Wilbur Fox, of Walker Hardware Company, Ltd., Belleville; and one brother, Edward Fox, of Oshawa, and one niece, Mrs. Willard Reed, of Montreal. Another son, Herbert Fox, died last year. His wife, the former Nettie May McCoy, died some years ago. Also surviving are six grandchildren.

The funeral was held from the Grant Funeral Home, North Front Street, on Monday afternoon. The service in the chapel, which was largely attended, was conducted by Rev. H. M. Davis, of Bridge Street United Church, who also performed the committal rites at Belleville cemetery.

On Sunday evening members of Madoc Lodge A.F. & A.M. augmented by members of the four Belleville lodges, held a memorial service at the funeral home with Rt. Wor. Bro. George West in charge.

The honorary bearers were Alex. Maguire, Percy Maguire, Larry Langlois, Lee Grills, Elmer Sandbrook and Erle Denyes.

The active bearers were: Walter Elliott, Don, Walter and William

PLAYING FIELDS BEING BUILT AT HIGH SCHOOL

During the past few days, the grounds adjacent to the Madoc High School have undergone a face-lifting. A huge bulldozer has moved tons of rock and dirt making a large level sports area. At present this surface is being covered with top soil and grass seed planted. When completed the school will have a smooth, level regulation rugby field and a baseball diamond large enough for either hard or softball.

Besides $2,000, being spent by School Area Board, a liberal amount is being donated by the students' council.

Eventually the grounds on Elgin Street will be landscaped and when completed the Madoc School will have a campus comparable with any in this part of the country.

Fox, William Wyllie and Murray Smith.

HOG GROWERS TO VOTE ON ASSEMBLY POINT PROGRAM

A vote will be taken on July 25th, throughout the Counties of Hastings, Northumberland, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington, on the Assembly Point program for the marketing of hogs. The Ontario Hog Producers' Association has been promoting the scheme, which has already been introduced in many counties of Western Ontario. Zone 2 is the first in Eastern Ontario to vote on the new plan.

Every farmer (one vote for each farm) will be eligible to vote on the assembly point question, with plans now under way to arrange the voting procedure similar to any civic election. The clerk of the township and a deputy returning officer will preside at the one poll established in each township in the zone. Voters' lists will be posted throughout the individual townships, and a court of revision will be held, probably about July 1st. It is understood that only farmers producing hogs will be eligible to vote.

Sanction for the vote was given at a meeting held in the Agricultural Office at Stirling on May 26th, with members of the Federation of Agriculture, Ontario Farmers' Union and others in attendance. A vote to get the opinion of those in attendance, divulged that many were in favor of the assembly point procedure of marketing. Present at the meeting was Mr. Boynton, secretary of the Ontario Hog Producers' Association and Roy Sills, President of the County group, was in charge.

According to the plan, marketing points for the four counties would set up at Norwood; at George Reid's farm, 4th con. of Sidney, and at the Newburgh Sales Barn. Farmers would be responsible for getting their hogs to one of these points, where Packers' representatives will make their bids.

Farmers would be forwarded literature, explaining the vote and the marketing plan, and their vote will be the key as to whether the scheme will be put into operation. Thus, it is emphasized that every farmer should become well-informed on the subject before he marks his ballot. The question has created considerable discussion within recent weeks, and there have been many arguments on both sides. It is a matter now of making a decision.

No doubt further meetings will be

QUINTE BRANCH UNITED EMPIRE LOYALIST ASSOC.

The annual business meeting of the Quinte Branch U.E.L. Association was held in the Adolphustown hall, evening of May 7th, 1958. There was a good attendance considering the heavy rain.

This being the time to receive the annual dues, the treasurer, Mr. H. G. Blakely, Picton, was kept busy making out the yearly membership cards.

The President is elected for one year only, according to the charter. The 1st Vice President follows automatically. The past president, Dr. Allison, of Picton, in passing this position on to Col. Davern, of Wellington, said he was thankful for the fine co-operation he had received from the executive and the members, during the past year. Another past president, Mr. Claude Young, of Wellington, told of the help he had received from members and friends in organizing the Quinte Branch U.E.L. Association in 1956. The membership is now 180, and anyone who is eligible (if you can trace your ancestry to the United Empire Loyalists), it will be much ap-held and there will probably be advertising explaining the important details.

preciated if you will write Dr. H. C. Park, on No. 33 Highway (via Free Burleigh, Genealogist, U.E.L., Bath, Ontario. These records of U.E.L. descendants make a good family reference for the future. This branch covers Pr. Edward, Lennox and Addington, Hastings and Northumberland Counties. Some members live as far away as Vancouver, being descendants of the U.E.L. of this area.

Col. Davern, the new president, said he looked forward to the same co-operation from the members and executive, as in the past.

Mr. Allan Dempsey, of Rednersville, gave a paper on the early settlement of Halliwell Township, (Prince Edward County.) This settlement was pioneered in 1784 by U.E.L.s. At one time Picton was called Halliwell, but later was named Picton, by an Irish preacher who named it after a general who fell in the Battle of Waterloo.

It is hoped all members will send in their annual dues, and help keep this worthy organization in a good financial condition. If you have any U.E.L. Historical documents, it will be appreciated if you would send in the name of these to Dr. Burleigh, Genealogist, U.E.L., Bath, Ontario.

her father, Mr. Philip McAvoy, was radiant in her white nylon chiffon bridal gown featuring a fitted bodice having a nylon yoke outlined at the back with nylon chiffon roses, long sheath-like sleeves ending in lily points over the hands, and floor-length skirt of nylon chiffon over taffeta. She wore a sequin-studded headpiece in crown effect and fingertip veil of nylon tulle, and carried a cascade bouquet of red roses, white stephanotis and trailing ivy.

Miss Helen McAvoy, of Ajax, Ontario, sister of the bride attended as maid of honour, gowned in ballerina-length pale green silk organza over taffeta with fitted bodice having short sleeves, round neckline, with bouffant skirt. She wore a matching green picture hat, matching mitts and carried a nosegay of pink and white chrysanthemums and fern.

Miss Agnes McAvoy, of Oshawa, and Miss Rita McAvoy, of Kingston, as bridesmaids, were gowned in pale yellow silk organza over taffeta, with matching picture hats, mitts and white shoes. They carried nosegays of yellow and white mums with adiantum fern.

Little three year old Sandra LaChapelle, of Stirling, niece of the bride, as flower girl, was demure and sweet in her floor-length frock of shrimp-coloured silk organza, with half bonnet headpiece and matching gloves. She carried a basket of white mums and white stephanotis.

The wedding reception was held in Stirling community hall, where a turkey dinner was served at high noon to 80 guests.

The bride's table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake topped with red, sweetheart roses, and flanked by white candles in crystal holders, and the bridal bouquets.

The bride's mother for her daughter's wedding chose a gown of brown crepe with beige accessories, beige picture hat, and corsage of yellow roses. She was assisted in the receiving line by the bridegroom's mother, who wore a navy-blue gown with navy duster coat, white picture hat and gloves, and corsage of red roses.

For travelling to the eastern United States, South Carolina, New York City, and Virginia, the bride wore a navy shantung ensemble with white collar and navy bow, white hat and gloves and white accessories, with corsage of red roses.

ST. PETER'S W.M.S.

The June meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held in St. Peter's Sunday School rooms. In the absence of the president, Miss Van-Kleeck, the vice-president Mrs. Jack Bailey, presided.

The service opened by singing the hymn "Zion's King shall reign victorious."

The secretary's report was read by Mrs. David Blakely. Twenty-one answered to the roll call and a goodly number of sick visitations and cards were reported.

The scripture lesson was given by Mrs. Harry Walden. Mrs. Bailey's reading was followed by an earnest prayer for the Missionaries and for the general assembly, that God's guidance and blessing would be theirs.

Miss Cecilia Heslip sang "Teach me to pray Lord," accompanied on the piano by Mrs. J. W. Hulin.

Mrs. Blakely had for her topic "What is the mission of the church?" and "What is my part in that Mission?" Are we like the early Christians who went everywhere preaching the Gospel? One of the problems of the Church today is the reluctant witness. "Ye shall be my witness first in Jerusalem, then to the uttermost parts of the earth." We should be active, dynamic, witnessing and worshipping Christians. Mrs. Kilpatrick stressed the power of the Holy Spirit in the early Christian Disciples. We also are chosen and entrusted with that same message of Salvation. Mrs. Ida Johnston's subject was "Our high calling in Christ Jesus." "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you." What a noble calling. May each of us say with Paul "I press toward the mark of my high calling in Christ Jesus." The meeting was brought to a close by singing the hymn, "Jesus shall reign" and repeating the Lord's prayer in unison. An hour of fellowship followed, while all partook of a dainty lunch, served by Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Kilpatrick.

OBITUARY

MRS. EGBERT FITCHETT

Friends and neighbours were shocked to hear of the sudden death of Ethel Fitchett on Friday.

Mrs. Fitchett was the wife of Mr. Egbert Fitchett, of the eleventh concession of Rawdon, Bonarlaw. Mrs. Fitchett is mourned by her husband; one son, Morris Heath, of Belleville; one step-son, Gerald Fitchett, of Campbellford; also three step-daughters, Mrs. Max Burnside, Madoc; Mrs. Harry Moorcroft, Foxboro, and Mrs. John Clarke, of Coneseon, at whose home she passed away on Friday, also one sister, Mrs. A.

Morrison, of Stirling.

Mrs. Fitchett lived her entire life in the Bonarlaw district; she was twice married, her first husband being the late Walter Heath.

Born Ethel A. Heagle to the late Emma and John Heagle in Springbrook, Mrs. Fitchett was a former member of Springbrook United Church, Springbrook Women's Association and Rawdon Women's Institute.

The funeral service was held on Monday at Bethel Church in Rawdon township, with the Rev. Howard Beare, of Springbrook United Church officiating, assisted by Mr. Fred Peer, of Peterborough. Burial took place in the church cemetery.

Bearers were Thomas McEwen, Harold Stapley, Robert, Percy and Walter Reid and Earl Finch.

KIWANIS MAKE DONATION TO MERRYWOOD CAMP FOR CRIPPLED CHILDREN

At last Thursday's Directors' Meeting of the Kiwanis Club, held at the Board room of the Public Library, several donations were made to worthy causes. The sum of fifty dollars was donated to the Merrywood Camp for Crippled Children near Smiths Falls, Ont., and agreed to furnish transportation to and from this camp for the crippled children of this area; authorized the Under-Privileged Child committee to purchase all necessary clothes so that a crippled child from the Millbridge area could attend this camp; made arrangements to procure a wheel chair for an elderly Madoc citizen who is badly in need of this equipment. Once again the club will sponsor the sale of Dutch bulbs, predominantly tulips, as a money-raising project. This is the second year for this project and it was continued mainly because of the wonderful success purchasers had this spring from bulbs sold by the club last fall. On Friday night, a film on the Honey Bee was shown the members, by Program Chairman Carl Howse, and Director Doug Pigden.

HARTS' — RIGGS' W.I.

The May or Grandmother's meeting was held at the home of the Secretary, Mrs. H. Stout. The meeting was opened in the form of a school day, with Mrs. N. Broad as teacher. Seventeen members, twelve visitors and seven children answered the roll call of their name as school pupils. In answering the teacher's questions, the behaviour of the pupils was the cause of many laughs. After the business was dealt with, Mrs. William Bateman, as program convener, took charge giving, "A Portrait of Grandmother is worth more than a thousand words." Mrs. Ted Meraw gave two readings, "Grandmother's Apron" and "A Perfect Day." A contest, "The most words made from the word 'Grandmother' was won by Mrs. N. Broad, with 44 words. Mrs. Allan Franks gave a reading "Grandmother's Lantern." Mrs. Wm. Bateman gave a well prepared paper on Citizenship, New Canadians, Immigrants and D.P.s.

The grandmothers, 13 in number, were asked to pass a table and pick

ONTARIO DEPARTMENT OF LANDS AND FORESTS

Hastings, Lennox & Addington and Frontenac Counties.

The Southern Townships of these counties were settled at the end of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth centuries. At that time the greater amount of timber exported from Canada was obtained in what is now Quebec and on the Ottawa River. The export trade had not been developed on Lake Ontario. Timber in this region at that time was considered an enemy. It was cut and burned as quickly as possible so as the area could be farmed. Small mills were established for cutting lumber of local use. Settlement gradually spread northward from the shore of Lake Ontario; in 1850, 25 miles of the southern ends of these counties, (that area now outside the fire district) became fairly well settled and most of the land was privately owned. Timbered areas were left. This scattered district is now a comparatively prosperous agricultural district with scattered farms, woodlots and wooded swamps. The impression that the forest area was unlimited rendered the settlers careless; the idea of reforesting and harvesting periodic crops was not then born in America. This area was principally hardwood with pine and other coniferous species in the minority.

About the beginning of the second half of the nineteenth century, due to the rapid growth in population in the Eastern United States and the diminishing supply in that country and also to Reciprocity between Canada and the United States, there was an enormous expansion of the timber industry in this region. There was a great demand for timber berths in the unsettled parts of the counties of Hastings, Lennox and Addington and Frontenac; such companies as the Gilmour, Rathbun, Bronson, McLaren and Stewart obtained large licenses within these counties. Gilmour and Co. of Ottawa established mills at Trenton and Ottawa. Rathbun established a mill at Mill Point, now Deseronto, and Bronson established a mill at Victoria Island in the Ottawa River. In 1853 this was the first mill in the Ottawa district which shipped lumber to the American market. The McLaren and Stewart Companies operated on the Mississippi River; Gilmour operations were in the Counties of Hastings, Peterborough and Frontenac. The timber from his Hastings and Peterborough limits a small gift therefrom.

Cake, ice cream and a cup of tea brought the meeting to a happy finish.

was seen at Trenton. The timber from his Frontenac Limits were driven down the Mississippi River to be sawn at Ottawa. The Rathbun Company operated in the Counties of Hastings, Frontenac and Lennox and Addington; in addition to their limits they purchased timber from private lands and held a large amount of timbered lands in fee simple. The Bronson Company operated in Northern Hastings at the headwaters of the Madawaska River. Enormous amounts of timber were removed from this area from 1860 until it reached its maximum about the year 1890; then the amount began to diminish and at the present day the amounts taken out of this area are comparatively small. The large operator has gone out of business; the small portable sawmill is being supplied by material which escaped the first logging and subsequent fires. Shantymen became settlers in this region but with the passing of the lumber industry they were forced to leave or eke out an existence on land which is not agricultural. Mr. T. Southworth describing the four townships of Barrie, Clarendon, Miller and Abinger in 1898 writes:

"The first settlement of any consequence in these townships took place in the early sixties, on the completion of what is known as the 'Snow' or Addington Road. The few settlers previous to that were men engaged in lumbering, and who had built cabins and cleared a small piece of ground for the purpose of growing vegetables and oats. They were 'Shantymen' rather than farmers, and it was not till the opening of the Colonization Road that any systematic attempt at farming was made.

Lumbering, or rather square timber operations, had been carried on for some years previous to this, supplies for men being taken in by water.

ANNE HIRST Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: I have just welcomed my married daughter into my home; she could not accept her mother-in-law's interference any longer. For over two years my girl has held a position and paid nearly all their household expenses to help her husband support his mother. She runs up bills in his name which their combined incomes cannot meet.

"Her mother-in-law has two other married children, both of whom have lovely homes, but because this son is the youngest she demands everything from them. When he married my daughter he told her their house belonged to him; it turns out to be his mother's, and if anything happened he would have nothing. Yet he and my girl have been supporting her entirely, even to her medical expenses.

"My daughter loves her husband, but she wants to live alone with him. He declares he will never leave his mother. So I told her not to go back to him while his mother lives there. I do hate to see her marriage go on the rocks, yet what other advice can I offer?

WORRIED MOTHER.

Your girl has my sympathy.

• She should, however, consult a lawyer to find whether she has grounds for legal separation, if that is what she is considering.

• If her husband were a man instead of his mother's little boy, he would admit he is not providing a home for his wife in the real sense of the word. She is under his mother's thumb in more than one way, and she has none of the rights which, as his wife, she merits. She and her husband cannot get ahead financially under the strain his mother imposes, not to mention her constant interference. Things can only go from bad to worse, unless he decides that his wife is more important to him than his mother. (Incidentally, he should also insist that the other children share their mother's living expenses no matter what arrangements are made for the future.)

• Wouldn't it be better for your daughter and her husband to find a small apartment for themselves? It could be nearby, so he can visit his mother regularly. That would give your daughter a real home, and relieve her of the older woman's impositions.

• It does seem up to her husband to choose between his mother and his wife, and a cruel choice it is for any man. But if his love for his wife is equal to hers for him, there is no question where his loyalty belongs.

WOULD DATE BOY

"Dear Anne Hirst: I like a boy very much who is in my English class. What excuse can I use to talk to him, and yet not appear too forward or too dumb?

"Last year about this time he asked for a date, but I was going steady with somebody else so I couldn't accept. Now I'd give anything to go with him!

STILL HOPING

• Some day soon mention to the lad that English is one of your toughest subjects, and you wonder if he would help you now and then? Choose a few timely questions, and maybe he will feel flattered to swallow the bait.

• Yes, the girl usually speaks first when they pass in the hall. Good luck!

Many of the problems that marriage brings would never arise if wife and husband could live alone together. If this question worries you, ask Anne Hirst's opinion; perhaps she can find a solution. Address her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ont.

WHAT A CARD

Most of the patrons of Paul Waner's batting range in Pittsburgh come out just to talk to him. It's reached a point where the old batting great has had a car printed, which he hands each visitor. It reads:

"Paul, how are you? — Fine, thank you."

"How is your brother Lloyd? — Fine, thank you."

"What is he doing? — Nothing."

"What are you doing? — Practically nothing."

"What do you think of the Pirates? — Practically nothing."

"Any good hitters at your batting range? — One."

"Why don't you sign him for the Pirates? — I am too old."

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM by Gwendoline P. Clarke

At last we've had some rain — a good, warm rain. Now everything looks so green. Newly planted shrubs, trees and garden plants have lost their sad, wilted appearance. Discouraged green peas and beans are showing more signs of life and we hope other garden stuff will soon be coming through.

Field crops, too, will benefit from the rain — spring grain certainly needed a good soaking, as did the wheat and forage crops. Partner and I find it hard to remember any year when the spring has been so dry. However, even weather conditions don't seem quite so important compared with a situation we ran into last week.

You may remember I was at Guelph — to a W.I. Conference. Partner came with me as far as Hespeler where he visited some friends living on a farm. So he was back again with the cows, the hens, and all the incidental farm chores. Also plenty of children. Now just read what had happened. Besides the regular family on the farm there was a married daughter, her husband and four small children. They had arrived one night about ten o'clock. No clothes, no furniture, no personal possessions. All had been lost in a fire that completely gutted their home — the far side of Stratford. Contents were only partly covered by insurance. They lost a new deep home-freezer, electric stove, refrigerator and television set. Bad enough, but it could have been worse. The children were playing outside when the biggest boy noticed a bright light inside the house and ran in to look for the reason. He soon found out and began screaming for his mother who was down in the cellar unaware of the tragedy. Had the child not gone in she would have been trapped as there was no exit from the cellar other than through the kitchen which was soon a mass of flames.

The cause of the fire was thought to be defective wiring. It is a familiar story—old house, original wiring, meant only for lighting purposes and minor equipment. Added to the home one by one were the heavy home appliances now in use in most homes. The wiring became overloaded and in time overheated. An outbreak of fire was the inevitable result. Later in the week we called briefly on some former neighbours near Ginger Farm who had recently installed similar new equipment but had taken the precaution of having their wiring inspected. The over-hauling and additions cost them well over two hundred dollars but that was certainly cheaper and safer than risking a fire.

We made a quick visit to Ginger Farm that same day. Such changes — we hardly knew the place. Grading was well underway, bulldozers and dump trucks continually at work. By the time I came away I felt as if I had eaten dust and grit. From the garden we managed to salvage a root of double lilac which I had always greatly treasured. Also some common lilac which had probably been there since the farm was homesteaded. After visiting the farm we always come away with a slight feeling of nostalgia, which, I suppose, is understandable. However, home is where you make it and every time we return to where we are now we find it beginning to look and feel more like our true home — especially now with everything so green and the birds flitting back and forth.

This week-end we did not expect any of the family here. Bob, Joy and Ross had gone to Elliott Lake for the week-end; Daughter and her family were off to Midland for the day so we took a ramble through the country along the back concessions. On one road in Trafalgar Township we saw a sign which read — "Dog Cemetery around the Corner." That, of course, had to be investigated. We found the cemetery and there must have been four or five hundred little graves, complete with inscribed tombstones — some big, some small. Not all were dog-graves. There were a number of cats, two rabbits and a monkey. Several dogs had been 18 years old and some of the tombstones told their own pathetic little story. As for instance "In memory of Trixie and Rex who were killed by an unknown motorist." And two German shepherds "who died defending their master's property during a robbery." And one of a "seeing-eye" dog greatly missed by his master. There were quite a number of new graves, minus tombstones, but with wreaths of flowers in loving memory.

I suppose the idea of a Pet Cemetery sounds somewhat extreme to materialistic people but there is little doubt the loss of a faithful pet can be a great grief to the owner and perhaps to have its grave marked and cared for is some consolation. I know we left several dog and cat graves at Ginger Farm. Poor, high-strung Tippy was the last, our faithful old collie who finally died of pneumonia; wagging her tail feebly right to the very last in recognition of our loving care. Rusty, I am glad to say, is still alive and well; I paid him a visit last week. We do not forget the dogs we couldn't keep.

Coronation Dress

Such splendor I had never seen before and may never see again. The Abbey is wearing Coronation draperies of blue brocade. Along its aisle spreads a seamless carpet of cerulean blue, changing at the Theatre's steps to a warm shade of pale honey. Clustered lights hang low at triforium level shedding a dulcet glow. The clamour of color in dress and uniform is already here, and from my privileged seat in the Queen's Box I can see every happening and every arrival. Soon I shall be seeing the dress I have made, being worn by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Second for her Crowning.

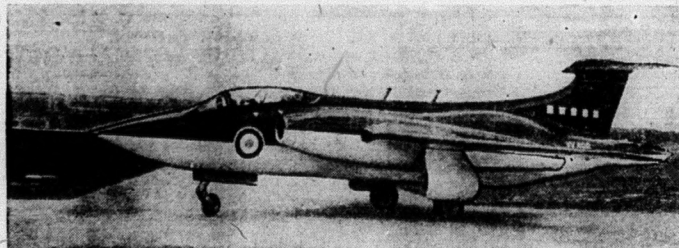

My mind goes back to the dim and uncertain days of 30 years ago when, on St. George's Day, the 23rd April in 1923, I resolved to establish myself in London. In June of that year I designed my first dress for my first humble customer.

I think of those years of struggle and disappointment and I remember the three pounds a week I used to earn and how I lost that job one Christmas Eve; and I wonder irrelevantly if the Number 16 omnibus still rumbles up the Edgware Road.

I think, too, of all the kindness I have known and of all the women and craftsmen who have worked to prepare the dress the Queen is now wearing.

I think of the long road behind me, leading up to this honor and bringing me to Westminster Abbey. What I suffered, learned and enjoyed on the way, is the story I presently tell. —From "Silver and Gold", by Norman Hartnell.

BRITAIN CLAIMS MILITARY PLANE EDGE—This is the Blackburn NA-39 bomber, Britain's newest military plane. British authorities say that the plane, capable of delivering nuclear weapons, represents a three-year lead "over every other country". Its makers say the twin-jet craft is suitable for land or ship-based operations.

"Fair Lady" Goes Big In England

London Bridge could have been falling down last week and no fair lady would have noticed. The really big noise in town was the opening at the Theater Royal, Drury Lane.

"No show can possibly live up to the advance raves of 'My Fair Lady,'" wrote The Daily Herald critic next morning. He then went on to paraphrase a lyric from the show: "But by George, they did it. Yes, they did it!" Fellow critics were almost unanimous in their salutes: "Rousing", "lilting", "exhilarating", "glittering". The sidewalk watchers massed outside the theater an hour before curtain time to star-gaze at the attending celebrities, among them Ingrid Bergman, Sarah Churchill, Kay Kendall, and U.S. Ambassador John Hay Whitney.

Applause exploded the moment the curtain rose and rolled again and again for the entrances of Julie Andrews, Rex Harrison, Stanley Holloway, and Robert Coote — all of the original Broadway company. At the end the audience stood and cheered for four minutes and ten curtain calls. Only the orchestra's "God Save the Queen" could and did finally stop them.

This was the most impressive musical to hit town since "Chin-Chin-Chow" in 1916, and London had never seen such an advance build-up. Despite the protection of copyright laws that forbade the playing of the show tunes and the sale of sheet music and records, "I Could Have Danced All Night" and "On the Street Where You Live" were almost staples for dance bands at private parties and in clubs. Commercially bootlegged show albums sold readily for $11.20 (as opposed to a legal $3.85 in the U.S.).

The press had long been ecstatic. After all, though the show was an American production, everybody felt it was Britons who made the thing go—Rex Harrison, Julie Andrews, Cecil Beaton, Stanley Holloway, Robert Coote. The press was also full of "Fair Lady" odds and ends. Was it right for Eliza Doolittle to step out of character to belt out the bellicose "Show Me" song? Can one really see St. Paul's from Covent Garden, as the show suggests? (Answer: Yes, from the roof.) An actress named Frances Day reported to a gossip columnist that she had got in touch with George Bernard Shaw's ghost, and he had been very announced with the whole project. Everybody read that the London version would have a bigger chorus than the New York production, and Cecil Beaton's costumes would not only be present in greater profusion but with considerably wilder chic.

The advance publicity had not been all good. Stanley Holloway, who plays Eliza's father, had something to say about Rex

Harrison: "Two years we worked together and never once did he visit my dressing room. . . . Of course, he's such a hit in the show because he's really playing himself — an intolerant, slightly boucherish character with tremendous charm for women." Harrison commented "I think he was misquoted. I saw him yesterday and he was awfully miserable about it all."

As a result of all the publicity, good and bad, the advance ticket sale, which began six months ago, soared beyond $400,000. Price for a bootlegged first-night pair $140.

It was sad that Shaw, who had such a great personal admiration for money, could not be on hand to use some of the new stuff himself. From the looks of it, he would be whirling enviously in his grave for a long time to come.

HANKIE PANKIE

Lefty Gomez once set a snare for Hank Greenberg. When he got two strikes on Hank, Bill Dickey was to step out of the catcher's box as if Gomez were going to throw a pitch-out. Then, as Hank relaxed, Dickey was to jump back and Gomez was to fire one over the plate for the third strike.

At this point, somebody will always ask, "Well, how did it work out?"

"I don't know," Gomez will ruefully answer. "I could never get two strikes on the guy!"

Loose Screw Nails Customs Smuggler

A stocky, rather portly man approached the Customs' desk at a busy port on the English south coast. He seemed out of breath. "That's the worst of these Continental holidays," he wheezed. "Us big fellows are just about exhausted after all that touring."

He mopped his face with his handkerchief, then heaved his suitcase onto the desk. "Here you are," he chuckled. "Do your worst on that."

The Customs man looked at his genial customer. "Would you mind stepping this way, sir?" he asked.

"What for," demanded the man, all trace of his previous bonhomie disappearing. "I haven't done anything."

He was taken to a small room at the rear of the Customs hall. There he was searched. He stood, guilty and angry-looking, as a belt of wrist watches and jewelry was removed from around his waist.

It was revealed he had been carrying no less than $6,000 worth of smuggled goods on him. Only the officer's sharp eye had prevented him getting away with it.

Hundreds like him are caught every year. Over $1,800,000 has been taken in goods confiscated and sold by the Customs and Excise in the past two years. $200,000 in currency has been apprehended in the same time.

Many respectable and otherwise law-abiding citizens seem to regard the Customs as fair game. It has been estimated that no less than one in three people coming into Great Britain try to smuggle something through—if only for the fact that they can boast to their friends in the pub of their achievement.

Few of them get away with it. If they do it once they are caught the second time. The "hail-fellow-well-met" and the "I-couldn't-care-less" type are all well known to Customs men. They are trained to spot almost in one glance the too-ready smile and shifty eyes of the amateur smuggler.

One seemingly respectable business man was caught while conversing with an official because he kept nervously fingering his collar and tie. A normal gesture, you would think. But the official was curious.

He asked to see the tie. In the lining, rolled into tight wads, he found a strip of five pound notes. There were more in the shirt.

"I only did it for fun," pleaded the man. His "fun" cost him his job as an accountant.

Most of the small-time smugglers aren't worried whether they are caught or not. They cheerfully say good-bye to the article and pay three times its duty value. It's the professional who keeps the Customs on their toes. A constant state of war exists between them with each side trying to outwit the other.

A big closed car came up in front of officials at a south coast depot recently. With its well-upholstered interior and its general air of smartness, it looked as though it was the pride and joy of some car enthusiast.

The Customs men went to work. The arm-rests were taken out—underneath were hundreds of Swiss watches.

The same went for the seats and dashboard. One thousand pounds' worth of currency was found in the lining of the tires and inner tubes. Soldered under the chassis, officials found hundreds more watches.

By the time the search was over the car looked as though a bomb had dropped on it—torn upholstery and twisted metal lay everywhere. But it had yielded thousands of pounds' worth of smuggled goods.

All types seem to like trying their luck against the Customs. When a homely-looking, grey haired woman made her way to the bench at one busy airport, officials scarcely gave her a second glance. She looked just like another (careworn) mother returning from her first holiday for some time.

Casually, she was asked the routine questions, and the officer began to chalk her case. Suddenly he jugged his finger on something sharp. He ran his fingers quickly along the seams of the case and felt a loose screw.

He gave it a jerk and the lining of the case fell away. Tacked to the hardboard interior he found nearly $3,000 in notes!

At London Airport recently one of the passengers from a newly arrived flight made his way with slow, measured treads to the Customs. He was a big man and his precise steps looked rather unusual.

He was asked to remove his shoes. He protested and said he was having special treatment for his feet—that walking slowly was the only way he could get relief. He even produced a medical certificate to prove it. But the Customs man was adamant.

In the specially designed heels were found several valuable gold watches. He had trouble with his feet all right—several hundred-pounds' worth!

The Customs and Excise are often at work as a suspect steps off his plane or boat.

Some weeks ago a well-dressed, elegant looking man tripped confidently down the landing stage of a plane just arrived from Brussels. He adjusted his hat, patted his overcoat and made his way to the Customs.

There, to his apparent bewilderment, his overcoat and hat were taken from him and searched. Woven into the linings were found hundreds of pounds of English currency.

How had he been spotted? A Customs man with a pair of binoculars had been on the roof of the airport reception centre and had seen him give that reassuring pat to his coat.

Probably one of the most unusual cases yet heard of was the Continental clergyman recently allowed to proceed unsearched through the Customs. With his clerical collar and general air of innocence he looked the last person on earth to be a smuggler.

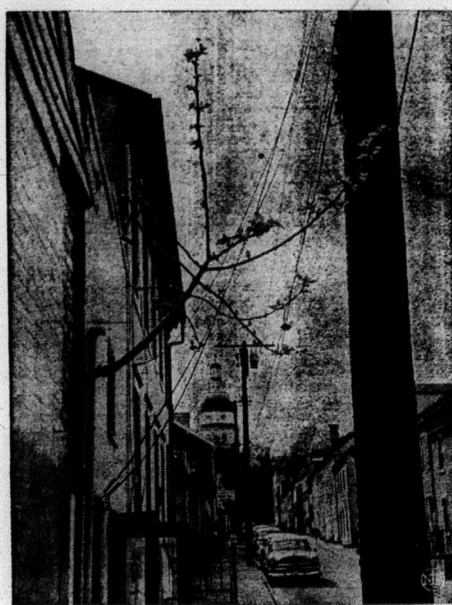

But he was suspected, and several days later was apprehended. His car was searched. He was found to be carrying thousands of pounds' worth of smuggled goods under the seats. He was one of the dupes used by a well known smuggling gang but, he declared, he hadn't known a thing of what had been going on!

THE FROZEN LIMIT

In sub-zero weather firemen of Charleston brought their engine to a halt at the home of Arthur Williams. They found the man snugly tucked up in bed.

To the surprised firemen he explained that it was too cold to get up, even for a fire. "I knew you boys would be here in a few minutes."

It transpired that a stove had set a wall ablaze and a neighbour had summoned the fire brigade. Estimated damage was £4.

Send Messages By The Spirits

A noble of the veiled Tuareg tribe in the Sahara discovered that his wife was having a love affair with another, and went out to find him. Both were on camels when they met. They drew swords and charged each other.

The husband's sword struck the other on the shoulder, passed through his body, through the saddle, and for enough into the camel to kill it!

Robert Christopher, who has stayed with the Tuaregs, says it would seem impossible that either man or sword could be strong enough to accomplish such a feat, but it is true, and reveals how they have retained their old training in strength and skill with arms.

There was no trial, for he was avenging his honour, sacred to a Tuareg noble. The erring wife, banished from the tribe, had only two alternatives—to kill herself or go on the streets of a town. That is one reason why Tuareg infidelity is extremely rare.

Christopher found that the Tuaregs are highly superstitious. A woman who wants to know when her husband or lover will return from a long journey need only go to the nearest graveyard when the moon is full, lie on a relative's grave, put her ear to the stones, and the relative's spirit will give her the estimated time of arrival.

In a land with very poor postal services and no telephones, Christopher says, this serves a useful purpose. "There is no doubt that it works and any Tuareg will tell you that they have been doing it successfully for hundreds of years," he writes in a vivid account of his Saharan travels: "Ocean of Fire."

Once, sitting round the camp fire, he began poking at the coals with a stick. Conversation at once stopped, the man across the fire stared at him as he'd suddenly turned into a monster, another on his right knocked the stick out of his hands—because they believe that poking a fire stokes the camels from giving milk!

Many times, while he travelled in caravan, the party made wide detours around a grave so as not to disturb the dead, believing that if they did so the spirit would most certainly join the caravan.

Shaving before noon invites disaster. Carrying a lighted stick from one fire to another wakes the wild desert creatures and invites them to bring death into your camp. Should you squirt the milk directly into your mouth while milking a camel it will stop giving milk.

Prof. Claude Banguernon, a teacher and scholar who has lived eight years in the desert, took Christopher to see the battlefield near the village of Tigher where the Tuareg army made its last heroic stand against the French, and the warriors lie buried under piles of rocks instead of being interred. They stopped by one of these rock piles, and Claude suggested that they remove some of the rocks in order to see the skeleton and the equipment he had been carrying. At once a small bird began flying overhead.

"How amazing," said Claude. "That bird shouldn't be here, for they don't come to this area until spring!"

In his eight years it was the first he'd ever seen out of season. When they resumed picking up stones the bird flew around their heads as if intending to attack them; it was obviously trying to keep them from the grave. They walked a few feet away and it circled them again. When they replaced the stones and mounted their camels, it vanished.

Christopher thought it had a nest hidden among the rocks, but Claude said: "That's impossible. It's months before the nesting season. They don't make their nest on the ground, anyway. Let's take a look and make sure, but"—raising his voice—"we will not disturb the grave!"

They searched carefully among the rocks but found no sign of a nest—nor of the bird again. It was a disquieting, uncanny experience, like many in this first-hand record of the day-to-day life of a strange people.

WILL PROSECUTE — Lebanon's Premier Sami El Solh says the government will prosecute leaders of the Lebanese uprising once law and order have been restored. Solh, speaking in Beirut, said there would be no compromise with opposition forces who have kept the country in a turmoil recently.

High Drama In Our Courts

One of the oldest of our legal institutions is still working satisfactorily — the jury system. Twelve good men and true — and this includes women — are chosen to hear a case against a fellow-citizen, and decide on the evidence whether, as a matter of fact, he has done something wrong.

The judge does not decide matters of fact, he is concerned with questions of law. The jury must decide, and if they have a doubt, the accused must have the benefit of it. Eminent lawyers have said that, in their experience, a jury is very seldom wrong.

Of course, there are moments of high drama in trials where a man's life is at stake. Edgar Wallace once said that in murder cases he could always tell whether they were going to say "Guilty" if, as they filed in, none of them looked at the prisoner.

It was high drama, indeed, in an English court some years ago when the jury had found a man guilty. In measured terms the judge sentenced him to death, and immediately after sentence

Mr. Farmer:

Why should you face that hayloader or handle bales again this year, when you can take the back-break out of the job with a McKee One-Man Shredder Harvester?

Remember a McKee Shredder Harvester is not a "one-job" machine, aside from making better hay than with any other equipment, they are widely used for harvesting grass silage, corn silage, swathed grain and combined straw.

We have sold McKee Shredder Harvesters to over 3,000 progressive farmers in Ontario.

Write us for literature and the names of McKee owners in your district, get the facts before you invest.

We have factory representatives in your area ready to call and talk things over, you are under no obligation. Order yours to-day and keep it busy all summer long.

The Americans use a similar jury system. In Chicago, not long ago, the name of a woman was called out for jury service in a trial. As her name was read out, the court bailiff stood up. "She is dead," he told the judge. He pointed to one of three defendants in court, "and he is charged with murdering her!"

But even juries have their lighter moments, and some of their verdicts are comic. On one occasion they found a man "Guilty while unconscious." An-

WILSON — In loving memory of Andrew James Wilson, who went to his eternal rest on June 11, 1954. On that day he passed away. Tears and sadness came our way. The Lord had called to our dear one On earth at last his task was done. We missed his voice, his cheeriness. The smile that gave such happiness. But fond memories we do keep. While in peace he doth sleep. Always remembered by his wife, family and grandchildren.

IN MEMORIAM

CATERER — In loving memory of a dear dad, William Caterer, who passed away June 12, 1955.

In tears we saw you sinking,
We watched you fade away,
Our hearts were almost broken,
You fought so hard to stay;
But when we saw you sleeping
So peacefully free from pain,
We could not wish you back,
To suffer that again.

NEW SYSTEM OF TESTING HEARING EXPLAINED TO KIWANIS

At the regular dinner meeting of the Madoc Kiwanis Club, held at Blue's Hotel last Friday evening, the system used to test the hearing of school children and others was fully explained by Mr. Gerald Ingles, of Tweed.

The instrument used for this purpose is an Audiometer, which will determine the degree of hearing of each child and will enable the parent to take corrective measures before permanent damage is done. The speaker stated that tests have proven that over 2½% of all children have medically significant hearing loss which may not be otherwise recognized.

The speaker was introduced by Program Chairman Carl Howse and thanked by Rev. Bill Gioveti.

The program this week will be in charge of the Camera Club of Belleville. "The ins and outs of Amateur Photography."

FARMERS GET MINOR BREAK IN BUDGET

The Canadian farmer got a minor break in Finance Minister Fleming's budget, with elimination of sales tax on some goods he purchases.

Mr. Fleming said most goods used exclusively or almost exclusively by farmers now are exempt from the 10-per-cent sales tax.

The list would be lengthened by the addition of stock conditioners and feed supplement for poultry and livestock, rat-killers, tree-guards for fruit growers and all materials used in the manufacture of grain and seed-cleaning machines.

In addition, all machinery used outside processing plants in the handling of sugar beets, will be exempt, if it is of a kind not made in Canada.

NEW CANADIANS

Mr. and Mrs. K. A. Schurm, R.R. 3, Madoc, were among forty-eight new Canadians who took the oath of allegiance and received their citizenship papers at a special court held in Belleville on Wednesday.

TRINITY LADIES' CLUB

Many members of Trinity Ladies' Club attended their annual Pot-luck supper, held at the home of Mrs. George Duffin, on June 10th. Always a popular event, a great variety of delicious dishes made up an attractive buffet and appreciation was extended to Mrs. Duffin for welcoming the club, once again, to her home.

Following a leisurely supper, there was a short business period, with plans being made toward catering to a wedding and also a tea, the latter to be held on June 30th, on the lawn of the Presbyterian Church in connection with the Old Boys' Reunion.

Miss Anne Nickle, talented member of the club and bride-to-be, was presented with a farewell gift by Mrs. Carl Howse.

The programme, arranged by Mrs. McGowan, was an extension of last month's panel discussion, when this time a panel of mothers gave their version of "Problems of teen-agers." Mrs. (Dr.) Beatty was moderator with Mrs. Carl Howse, Mrs. J. McGowan, Mrs. Geo. Fox and Mrs. Geo. Devolin making up the panel.

An original contest and reading were also included in this last meeting of the season.

MANY FRIENDS HONOUR BRIDE, BRIDEGROOM

A large number of friends and neighbours gathered in Ivanhoe Town Hall on Friday evening, June 6, to honour the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bashall, of Belleville.

Stella, better known as 'Dolly', is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip McAvoy.

Mr. Reg. Haggerty acted as chairman for the following short program: community singing led by Reg. with Mrs. Haggerty at the piano; solo, Rose Anne McAvoy; violin music, Danny McAvoy.

The bride and bridegroom were called to the platform and an address was read by Miss Eleanor Wright and the presentation of two handsome chairs was made by John and Gerald Kerby and Leo McAvoy. The happy couple were the recipients of other lovely gifts.

Appreciation and thanks were expressed by Dick and Dolly and all joined in singing, "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

Short speeches were given by Messrs. Pat Callery, Charles Moreland, and Harry Lovibond.

Refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. Music was furnished by Ronnie Johnston, Ruth Mumby and Danny McAvoy.

The best wishes of the community for a long and happy married life go with Dick and Dolly.

SURPRISE PARTY

A very pleasant afternoon was spent by the neighbours, at the home of Mrs. Will Stewart, which was tastefully decorated with lilac and spring flowers in honour of Mrs. James Aylesworth who will soon be spending some time in the British Isles and on the continent.

During the afternoon, there were several readings and a tree contest which was won by Mrs. James Rose.

Miss Agnes Walsh read a very appropriate address and Mrs. Rose presented Mrs. Aylesworth with a cosmetic travelling bag.

Mrs. Aylesworth, who was completely taken by surprise, thanked

49 CANADIANS DIE IN ACCIDENTS OVER WEEKEND

Norty-nine Canadians were killed in weekend accidents—32 on the roads and 11 drowned.

A Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. local times Friday to midnight Sunday showed one person died in a fire and five killed in various other accidents.

The toll by provinces (traffic deaths in brackets): Quebec 19 (14); Ontario 17 (11); New Brunswick 3 (1); Manitoba 3 (1); Alberta 3 (3); British Columbia 3 (1); Saskatchewan 1 (1).

Kenneth Sydaey, 5 struck by a train in Toronto, Saturday.

Henri Bertrand, 24, of Hull, Que., was killed in a car crash at Hawkesbury, Saturday.

Mrs. Agnes Miller died in a car crash at Rainy River Friday night.

Randolph Sennema, 9, was drowned in the Thames River at Chatham, Sunday.

Within eight and sound of more than 100 people, the boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sennema, of Chatham, slipped from a riverside dock and drowned at Tecumseh Park.

Two soccer players, attracted by the screams of the boy's companion, left their game on the playing field and plunged into 15 feet of dirty water fully clothed in an attempt to locate the drowning victim.

The trio gave up the search when police and firemen arrived to begin dragging. The body was located an hour later.

Two women were drowned Saturday when a car carrying three persons plunged off a bridge into a creek 25 miles east of Sarnia.

Drowned were Alvina Chesney, 47-year-old widow with seven children, and her married daughter, Rita Stribbel, 27, both of nearby Ennis-killen Township.

Gerald Bradshaw, 21, driver of the car, was charged with criminal negligence in connection with the deaths. He apparently was hurled out of the vehicle, grabbed a tree branch and pulled himself to safety. He was unhurt.

The body of Mrs. Chesney was recovered Saturday night. The body of her daughter was found Sunday. The mishap occurred on Bear Creek bridge, a few miles east of Ennis-killen Township.

Michael Madden, 16, Robert Walker, 18, Larry O'Connor, 17, and Douglas Morton, 20, all of Toronto, were drowned in Lake Scugog, 15 miles north of Oshawa, Saturday.

A man and a woman were killed Saturday afternoon when their car was struck by a CNR freight train at a level-crossing on the outskirts of Fort Erie.

Leonard Bauer, 38, and Mrs. Iva Reugg, 39, were killed in the crash. The 30-car freight train, hauled by three diesel engines, carried the Bauer car 100 yards along the tracks.

Engineer Frank Russell, of Toronto's suburban Etobicoke, said he blew his horn several times but the car still rolled onto the tracks. The freight was travelling from Fort Erie to Toronto. It was only a mile out of Fort Erie when the accident occurred.

A 20-year old University of Western Ontario student, Barnabas Kins, of Strathroy, died in hospital Sunday from injuries received in a one-car accident on Highway 22.

The youth, who had just completed his first year at university, was a passenger in a car driven by Sander Szilagyi, 24, of Strathroy. Szilagyi was treated for head injury and later released.

Police said the vehicle blew a tire, flipping it into the ditch where it rolled over three times.

Charles Johnston, 54, of Utopia, 50 miles north of Toronto, was killed Saturday when his car collided on the brow of a hill with a car driven by Gerrard Brown, of Alliston. Brown and two passengers in Johnston's car, soldiers at Camp Borden, escaped with minor injuries.

John Foreman, 10, of Cargill Ont., was killed Sunday when struck by an automobile while riding his bicycle. Police said the boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Foreman, rode into the path of a car driven by John L. Smith, of Triverton, in front of his farm home, 30 miles south of Owen Sound.

Melville Roy Clyde, 32, of Harrington, was killed Sunday night when his bicycle collided with a car driven by Roy Walker, 62, of Verona, on Highway 38 near Kingston.

Francis Charbonneau, eight-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Charbonneau was fatally injured Sunday in a traffic accident near his home at Stonecliffe, Ontario.

Peter McDuffe, 55, told police the boy came out from a group of children into the path of his car on Highway 17. He died four hours later in hospital in Deep River, about 85 miles northwest of Ottawa.

FRUSTRATED CUSTOMER

In reply to a request for a cheque in payment of a past-due item, a Company received the following letter from an "out-of-town" customer: Dear Manager:—

In reply to your request to send a cheque, I wish to inform you that the present condition of my Bank Account makes it impossible. My shattered financial condition is due to Federal Laws, Provincial Laws, Corporation Laws, Liquor Laws, Mother-in-laws, Brother-in-laws, Sister-in-laws and Outlaws.

Through these laws I am compelled to pay Real Estate Tax, Light Tax, Business Tax, Amusement Tax, Head Tax, School Tax, Gas Tax, Liquor Tax, Excise Tax, Carpet Tax, Income Tax, Food Tax, Sales Tax, Water Tax, Furniture Tax and Church Tax, even my brains are taxed. I am required to get a Business Licence, Truck Licence, Liquor Licence, not mention Marriage Licence and Dog Licence.

I am also expected to contribute to every Society and Organization which the genius of man is capable of bringing to life; Women's Relief, Unemployment Relief, the Gold Diggers' Relief, the A.M.S., A.A. and C.A.A., and also every Hospital and Charitable Institution in the city, including the Red Cross, Blue Cross, Black Cross, the Purple Cross and the Double Cross.

For my own safety I am required to carry Life Insurance, Liability Insurance, Burglary Insurance, Accident Insurance, Business Insurance, Compensation Insurance, Earthquake Insurance, Unemployment Insurance, Old Age Insurance and Fire Insurance.

My Business is so governed that it is no easy matter for me to find out who owns it and I am inspected, expected, suspected, dis-respected, required, summoned, fined, commanded and compelled until I provide an inexhaustible supply of money for every known need, desire or hope of the human race.

Simply because I refuse to do something or other, I am boycotted, talked about, lied about, fired, panned, held up, held down and robbed until I am ruined.

I can tell you honestly, but for a miracle which happened I could not enclose a cheque. The wolf that comes to my door now-a-days just had Pups in my kitchen. I sold the Pups and . . . here is the Cheque.

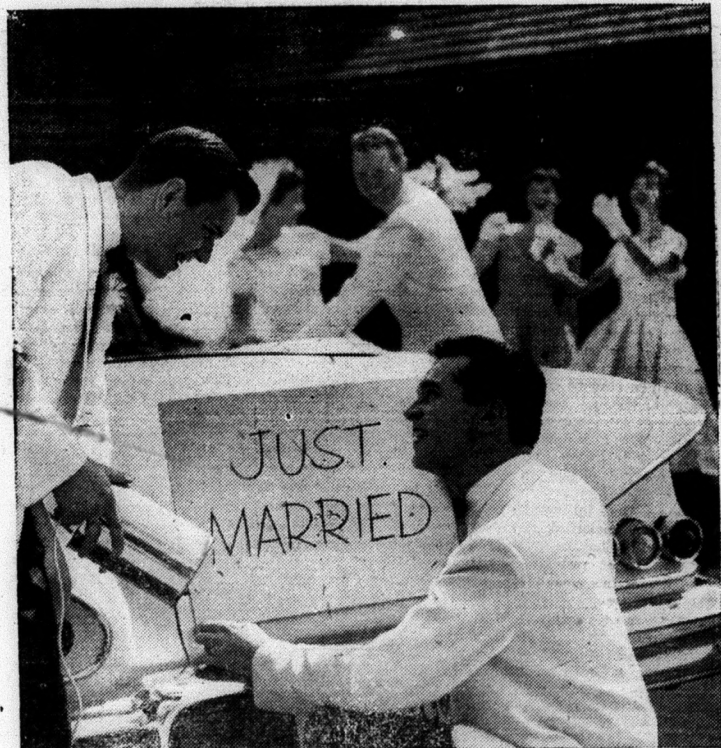

Yours very truly,

To save his life...

A boy's life hung in the balance—four-year-old Ron Tisdale of Montreal. Ron had swallowed a quantity of sleeping pills. Now he was in a coma. His breathing had stopped.

At St. Justine's Hospital, Ron was put into a resuscitator. His stomach was pumped out. He was given every anti-poison available. Still alive, he remained in a deep coma. It was feared that at any moment his life might flicker out.

At the Hospital, the doctor remembered reading about a powerful new anti-poison—Megimide. But where could it be obtained? Sister Catherine of St. Justine's, after trying several local calls, finally telephoned the Poison Control Centre of New York City. Did they have any? Yes—one half ounce, recently received from Britain.

At that very moment, an Eastern Air Lines plane was ready for its 11:45 takeoff for Montreal from New York. Another phone call, and considerate airline officials agreed to hold it; its passengers voted unanimously to wait. A car raced to the field, and a Health Department worker handed the precious vial to the stewardess. In a short while, a waiting car rushed the Megimide to St. Justine's and little Ron Tisdale was soon out of danger.

The world-renowned New York Times chose to tell in detail on its editorial pages this dramatic story. For what a story of human helpfulness this is of people using telephones, airplanes and automobiles—placing before all else their determination to help save that most precious thing . . . a human life.

We also like to think that this incident demonstrates how people turn to their telephone in times of urgent need. Fast and dependable, it stands ready to serve you too—at any hour of the day or night.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF CANADA

Sister Catherine of St. Justine's Hospital in Montreal called local sources for rare antidote required by doctor—then called Poison Control Centre of New York for emergency shipment.

Hasty phone call held New York-Montreal flight piloted by Captain Paul Abel. Stewardess Patricia Repoli received vial of rare anti-poison from New York Health Department worker.

Doctor at Montreal's St. Justine's Hospital helped save Ron Tisdale's life with Megimide—powerful new anti-poison which was finally located in New York.

Louise Larocque, Long Distance operator in Montreal handled crucial call to New York—one of countless telephone people who work behind the scenes in emergencies day and night.

JUNE 16th HALLOWED DATE UNITED EMPIRE LOYALISTS

Two events of more than ordinary importance to a great many Canadians are connected with June 16th.

It is the 174th anniversary of the arrival of several flat-bottomed Batteaux carrying four hundred women, men and children, at a point on the Bay of Quinte, known at that time as Fourth Town, later rechristened Adolphustown. This group of Loyalist refugees who had been forced to forsake their homes, and in many cases relatives and friends, in the British colonies which had become part of the new American republic and under the leadership of Major Peter VanAlstine, were seeking a new home in Canada.

It also is the second anniversary of that momentous day in 1956, when the Premier of Ontario, Leslie Frost, graciously accepted on behalf of the Province, the restored and re-dedicated United Empire Loyalist Burying Ground on the original two acre plot established 172 years previously, a project carried out by an inspired group of members of the Toronto Branch U.E.L. Association.

During his address of acceptance, Premier Frost announced his Government had arranged to take over the grassland plot of fifty acres encompassing the original site of the townsite of Adolphustown, and the adjoining old burying ground, to be henceforth known as the Bay of Quinte U.E.L. (Provincial) Park, a spot having gentle reminders of the past.

Anyone visiting this spot today can scarcely conceive the difficulties facing that intrepid little band of Loyalist settlers in 1784. The heavy timber growing almost to the water's edge, presented almost incalculable hardships, but spots were gradually cleared which permitted erection of log cabins, and as time went on, for small fields for cultivating food-stuffs. That this work also brought great dangers, may be cited in an instance occurring less than a week after arrival, when a sturdy young pioneer was killed by a falling limb as he worked on felling a tree. This accident required clearing a small spot for a burying ground, in which as the years went by, were laid to rest, many in unmarked graves, a goodly number of Loyalists.

The ceremony of restoration and re-dedication of this pioneer burying ground in 1956 was culmination of inspired efforts of a small group of Toronto Loyalist descendants. One of the leaders in the project was the late Mrs. R. S. McLaughlin, U.E.L., whose ancestors rested in this little neglected burying ground. Her late friend, Mrs. VanAlstine, U.E.L., with Mrs. W. H. Gutzeit, U.E.L. of Bath, Mr. Harvey Pollock, U.E.L. and Mr. James P. Lovick, U.E.L. of Toronto, were untiring in their efforts to raise the funds necessary (over $12,000), plan and supervise the project. Their recompense came on June 16th, 1956, when more than one thousand Loyalist descendants gathered to participate in the re-dedication ceremony.

Following closely on these events came the organization of the Bay of Quinte Branch of the United Empire Loyalist Association. Membership is rapidly approaching two hundred who are pleased to have the opportunity of perpetuating the ideals and activities of their Loyalist ancestors. It is hoped that as many more will become members during the ensuing year.

plans for the regular July membership meeting, it was suggested that they might plan a meeting in the open, right out in the Bay of Quinte U.E.L. (Provincial) Park and have it held a day or two ahead of the schedule on Tuesday, July 1st. (Dominion Day.)

In that way we can observe our two important June 16th anniversaries, together with our ninety-first Natal Day anniversary.

Our programme provides for an old fashioned social afternoon (following a basket picnic lunch) with full opportunity of meeting and becoming better acquainted with fellow members and their friends.

For the younger folks, Allen Dempsey and John Chard have worked out a fine programme of various sports and activities, with desirable prizes to be vied for.

Your hostesses and hosts will be more than a hundred U.E.L. members.

The time and place, Tuesday, July 1st, 2 to 5 p.m., in that hallowed spot, the Bay of Quinte U.E.L. (Provincial) Park at Adolphustown. It will be a day long to be remembered, patterned after those of a century ago. Plan to be there and enjoy it.

CAN MAKE GIFT OF $14,000 WITHOUT TAX

A once in a lifetime benefit conferred by the new federal budget will allow a husband to give his wife title to $10,000 in the home they share without having to pay gift tax on the transfer.

Under the same provision a parent can give his son or daughter a $10,000 share in a farm.

The exemption on such transfers up to $10,000, effective from last January 1st, can be claimed only once during the life of the giver.

The new benefit is in addition to the present exemption allowing gifts of up to $4,000 a year without gift tax. Thus in one year a gift of up to $14,000 may be made without paying tax — for example a half-share in a to enable them to carry on their community activities. So remember the date Saturday, June 28th, and help the Madoc Old Boys' Reunion Organization by enjoying yourselves at Murray Bros. Circus.

$28,000 house or farm.

Mr. Fleming said it will cover most of the difficult tax cases involving transfers of home ownership between husband and wife and of farm ownership between a farmer and his children.

The budget specifies that the transfer exemption applies only to property used as a home by the married couple, and to farms to be operated by the child or the farmer and child together.

Rate of gift tax ranges from 11 to 23 per cent on gifts between $5,000 and $500,000.

A second change involves the tax on gifts made within three years of the donor's death. Under law, such gifts must be included in the donor's estate on which succession duty may be levied.

The new measure will allow a refund of the amount by which the gift tax collected may exceed the succession duty on the gift. If there is no succession duty, the gift tax will be refunded.

At present any gift tax paid in these cases can be credited against a subsequent succession duty on the property involved, but there is no provision for refunds on any excess.

IN MEMORIAM

McCOY — In memory of our dear son, Russell, who passed away on June 23rd, 1946.

Beside your grave we often stand, But in the gloom the sweet words come,

Not lost, but gone before.

God knows how much we miss you, Russell,

He counts the tears we shed

And whispers "He only sleeps,

You loved one is not dead."

So we'll be brave, dear Russell,

And pray to God each day,

And when He calls us home to you

Your smile will guide the way.

LOST IN RIVER

A dock at Napanee Fuel and Supply Co. gave way last week and $3,000 worth of coal slid into the Napanee River.

The dock is about 300 feet long and is supported by heavy ties. It is built on the surface of the water so that it 'floats' to some extent, but low water in the river this year has taken away the support usually provided by the river itself. The eastern third of the dock sank.

Dear Anne Hirst:

All my life I have tried to live as a good woman should, but now, at 30, I am frustrated. Why can't I hold the friends I make, especially the men? I'm not a beauty, but I've been called very attractive and several men have paid me solicitous attention for quite a period. But I feel I have failed them all. They show they care for me, and some made promises that sounded sincere but turned out to be vague; they cool off, and I have to admit they have simply become bored. Then naturally I grow more self-conscious, and cannot be at my own best.

There are, so many women whose horizons end with their own four walls and idle gossip, yet they land husbands. While I (a successful woman in my profession) with varied interests, a true sympathy for others' problems, and a better-than-saving-humor, I go on and on from friend to friend making no progress toward my goal.

"Am I to sit back and give up? Never know marriage, never have a home and children? Or what can I do to interest a man and hold him for the rest of my life?"

"Can you blame me for concluding that men are out for what they can get, some decent girl to practice their lovemaking talents on until they find the right girl for themselves?"

FRUSTRATED

Sit down today in your quiet room, and examine yourself as though you were somebody else; you may ferret out the fault in your approach to these men you knew and lost.

Nearly a year ago another reader wrote me with the same problem; she was several years older than you, and as hopeless. I remember that I denied being a fatalist, and I persuaded her to relinquish the idea that one's destiny is fixed. The great element of chance, added to a woman's imagination and common sense, has been known to bring the fulfillment you seek.

A successful professional career can develop in a woman an arrogance that stifles any romantic impulse; positive personalities emerge that unintentionally reflect superiority. They defy one truth: That a male is still conquered by sheer womanliness, a little flattery and honest companionship. A girl can make him believe that SHE is the girl he'd like to come home to, an individual who fits his varying moods like a pair of gloves, asks no embarrassing questions, and is inspiring, sympathetic or tender as the moment demands.

A girl with marriage on her mind who has suffered more than one disappointment sometimes errs by yielding too soon to a man's lovemaking; he concludes she has been as free with others. Again, eager young women snub a man with such hostility that he believes her incapable of any emotional response. It is well to realize that most men can be repulsed graciously so that he believes he appeals to her but she has too much self-respect to yield to his blandishments.

Miracles do happen, you know. At just the time a woman like you gives up all hope, the right man suddenly turns her corner. Then how glad she is that all those other males passed her by! Tomorrow may bring your fate to you. Never give up hope.

Dear Anne Hirst:

I should be happy, because I've found a boy I really love. But one day he says he loves me, and the next day he acts so funny that I am afraid I am losing him. I know that I feel too hard for him when we first met.

"When we are alone we are always fighting, but when we're with another couple, or with my parents, he is a lot of fun. What shall I do?"

"Do you know any way I can fall out of love?"

Stop giving this boy every date he asks. That will mean that you will include your parents, or another couple, nearly every time you see him. This is the simplest way to fall out of love.

When you go out with other friends you will soon find out how much fun they can be, how much more considerate of you they are and you will have to admit that they are superior in character and thoughtfulness.

If you will be honest with yourself, this boy will soon find himself at the bottom of your list instead of tops.

When clouds of frustration darken your view, remember that happiness may be just around the corner. There's always tomorrow, and it may be bringing your greatest joy. Write your problem to Anne Hirst, Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ontario.

The salesgirl was describing the new four-piece outfit a model was wearing: "If you remove the bodice you will have a playsuit. If you remove the skirt you will have a sunsuit. If you remove anything else you will have a lawsuit."

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM by Gwendoline P. Clarke

Hospitals are not what they used to be. Gone are the austere white walls and furnishings; the white crinkled spreads and high sickroom beds. Modern hospitals now are cheerful and attractive—most of them similar to the one I visited yesterday. It was "Open House" at the new South-Peel General Hospital. Small, as compared with city hospitals, but lacking few of the essential facilities. The location is ideal — a stone's throw from No. 10 Highway, about a mile from Cooksville but actually on what is known as the "Upper Middle Road," with a background of fine hardwood trees.

The present accommodation at the hospital is 125 beds and 55 baby cots. But there is plenty of room for future expansion which undoubtedly will be needed.

There are only a few private rooms — at the present high rate few people can afford the luxury of a private room. Nor is it always advisable. Semi-private rooms are favoured by most of the general public. Or even ward-rooms — ward-rooms being a lot different from what they used to be. At South-Peel a ward consists of two beds to a room separated by a curtain or panel the length of the bed. At one side of the room there is an open connecting doorway leading to the other half of the ward — again with only two beds and the usual furnishings — a chest of drawers, bedside table, an easy chair and a straight chair and an adjustable bed-table for meals or reading, all in attractive steel walnut finish. The walls are in pastel colours with pretty drapes and spreads completing the colour scheme. The beds are adjusted by hydraulic control — low for convenience of patients able to get in and out of bed; high for nurses making beds or caring for the patients.

But all the emphasis has not been given to attractive surroundings — to what some call the "frills." Vital and essential equipment was given top priority. There are fully equipped X-ray rooms, laboratories, dispensaries, surgeries and labour rooms — plus a comfortable waiting-room for expectant fathers. And of course there is a marvellous kitchen with stainless steel sinks, tables and working areas. The laundry and sterilizing rooms are equally modern. All in all it looks like a hospital where one might expect the ultimate in care to promote speedy recovery to normal health — providing the Board is also to maintain a competent staff of physicians, nurses, and other personnel.

Q. Does the receipt of a birth announcement obligate one to send a gift to the new baby?

A. There is no obligation, but it is a nice gesture. If, however, one feels one cannot afford a gift, or is not on intimate terms with the new parents, then a congratulatory card or handwritten note would be in order.

Q. Is it considered proper for a girl who is not engaged to wear a diamond ring on the third finger of her left hand?

A. There is nothing improper about this—that is, if the girl does not care about the impression she is giving other persons.

Q. When a family is in the habit of saying grace before a meal, is it proper to adhere to this custom when there are guests for dinner?

A. This most certainly is the proper thing to do.

Q. If a great many wedding gifts have been received, wouldn't it be all right for the bride to mail out engraved cards of thanks?

A. Never! If a bride does not consider the gifts worth her time and effort to write personal notes of thanks, then it seems a shame that the donors devoted any time and money to her.

Q. We have just moved into a new community. Would it be all right if we were to give a buffet dinner for our new neighbors?

A. This might be all right in a very informal community. Usually, however, it is more advisable to wait until your neighbors make such overtures of friendship.

Q. I have been invited to spend two weeks with a good friend and her husband who live in another town. Would it be proper for me to offer them some money to cover any extra expenses my visit might entail?

A. It would be much better if you did not offer them any money. A nice useful gift of some kind would be much more in order.

factor—the skill of doctors and the cooperation of patients—and their families. All play a part; all help or retard a patient's recovery. If only more people would realize it — especially those who, in the kindness of their hearts, visit friends who are ill.

A few days ago I called to inquire for an acquaintance confined to bed in her own home with a heart condition. The fore part of the week she had been improving nicely; then on Thursday came three visitors in succession. One of them, a good hearted soul but unfortunately very talkative and having a loud voice. Towards evening, following these visits, the patient took another attack and the doctor had to be sent for. If only sympathetic friends would confine their visits to about five minutes. A sick-person loves to know that friends are thinking of her but the effort of taking part in a conversation, or even listening for too long a time is often more than she can stand. Weakness and the extra exertion involved often leaves her in a bath of perspiration. In hospitals the hours for visiting are fortunately limited. It is in a patient's own home where the greatest harm is done; the patient and her family are afraid of appearing ungrateful to those who come to call. May I suggest that in such cases you ask the advice of your doctor. He will probably limit the number of visits and the length of time the visitors should stay. His authority will let you out of an awkward situation. To the next visitor you may truthfully say—"Yes, Annie will love to see you but the doctor says visitors should stay no longer than five minutes." If the visit is prolonged, break it up!

We had visitors yesterday, but for more than five minutes. Daughter and family arrived for their first visit since the boys recovered from the measles. Full of fun and energy they made a bee-line for the swings directly. They were happy so Daughter, the baby and I left the big men and little men together and took off for Milton on a short visit to Bob and Joy in their new home. We did not stay for supper as they are not yet ready for a house-warming!

Incidentally we are wondering how long it takes anyone to get settled. Last week we were held up three days over the installation of a screen door. It was partly finished and then left for three days. A general mix-up all round. We waited expecting the men to return; the men meanwhile lacked the proper tools and waited for them to come in. The girl in the office did not understand the situation and gave us incorrect information. Now we are wondering — if it takes three days to install a door how long would it take to build a house?

SPARKS LAUGHS — See anything to laugh about? Neither do we, but every time Red Skelton looks at long-limbed big-eyed, perky-nosed Sharl Stennette, he laughs. But she doesn't mind. She's in bit parts on his show, but he's grooming her as a future comedienne. She says: "Mr. Skelton sees a clown quality in my face." Laugh, clown, laugh.

DIRTY DOG

The character and his hound came into the billiard parlor and sat down.

"This dog talks," the character announced proudly.

"I don't believe it," snapped the proprietor.

"All right, I'll show you." Turning to the dog, "What's on top of a house?"

"R-r-r-roof!"

"And how's business these days?"

"R-r-rough!"

"And who's the longest hitter in baseball?"

"R-r-ruth!"

"Waugh!" snarled the proprietor. "It's a fake." And he tossed both the character and his dog out of the place.

"Shame on you," said the character to his dog, as he staggered to his feet.

"Yeah," apologized the dog. "Maybe I should have said Willie Mays."

SENTIMENTAL JOURNEY — Seagoing "newsboy," William "Pat" Reid above, makes a six-mile voyage every week from Cohasset, Mass., to Boston Lightship to deliver Sunday editions of Boston newspapers. Delivery is made under terms of the will of the late James Dean, Boston stock exchange executive. Dean, who made the run himself until his death in 1942, placed $10,000 in the Permanent Charity Fund of Boston on condition that the delivery to the lonely lightship be perpetuated.

A Shell-less Snail With Lots Of Arms

Most people regard the octopus with horror, yet it is really one of the most remarkable of sea creatures, and nothing like so sinister as popular fiction would have us believe.

It is difficult to decide which is the greater marvel — its peculiar structure, or the high degree of intelligence underlying its interesting habits.

Who would believe that the octopus is related to the snail and the wheel? Or that its remote ancestors many millions of years ago lived in a coiled shell?

The shell has been lost, and the flat muscular foot on which the ancestral octopus glided along like a snail has been converted into eight formidable arms each with an array of highly efficient suckers, arranged in two rows and graded in size to match the gradual tapering of the arms.

In the centre of this ring of arms is the creature's mouth, complete with horny jaws very much like a parrot's beak to look at, and just as effective.

The octopus' brain is so well developed that it is among the most intelligent of all animals without backbones, and its eyes are among the most efficient in the animal kingdom.

It is in its hunting and feeding habits that the octopus shows its intelligence. Crabs and lobsters are its favourite food, and consequently it is not very popular with fishermen. It often gets into their lobster pots, leaving behind a collection of empty shells.

The octopus is mainly an in-shore animal, hiding during the daytime under overhanging rocks, where it is always on the alert for any unwary crab which may come within range, oblivious of its presence. When this does happen one of the eight arms shoots out, not to grip the crab with suckers, but to give it a gentle flick between the eyes with the thin flexible tip.

The crab seems to be completely hypnotized by the sudden appearance of the octopus, because although it brandishes its claws and raises its body — a typical defensive attitude — it offers no resistance as the octopus grips it and draws it into its lair.

The eight arms are connected by a fleshy webbing forming a kind of umbrella under which the crab is imprisoned until required. By the time the feast begins as many as a dozen crabs may have been collected. These are then pulled apart joint by joint, the meat being extracted by the thin tips of the arms and carried to the mouth.

Many stories illustrate the intelligence of the octopus. Although it will never eat fish unless desperately hungry, it has been known to kill a small fish and poke it outside its lair as a bait to attract unwary crabs.

It is partial to oysters, mussels and other bivalves, but is not strong enough to open the shells if these are closed.

One specimen was observed watching a large mussel for hours, apparently aware that sooner or later it would open up. When at last it did, the octopus quickly pushed a small stone between the valves so that they could not be closed again, and proceeded at leisure to claim his reward.

Another incident demonstrates clearly the memory of the octopus. Some captive specimens known to be hungry were given

A QUEEN IS CROWNED — FINALLY — After striking out twice, judges in the Miss England contest finally came up with a winner. First choice was June Cooper, left, but it turned out that she was too young (17) for the crown. Then pert Wendy Peters, center, was chosen but it was discovered that she was married and so disqualified. So, the third choice was crowned Miss England. She's 19-year-old Dorothy Hazeltine, right, neither too young, too old or wed. She's just a nice 36-24-37.

some oysters. For a long time they examined the shells with the tips of their arms, obviously trying to find a way of opening them.

They met with no success and eventually gave up.

A week later they were again offered oysters, but as soon as they recognized what they were they took no further interest in them, and made an attempt to open them.

Lobsters are more difficult for the octopus to catch than crabs. It is the lobster's claws which are the danger. Once the octopus has managed to grip these with its suckers the lobster is vanquished, but a prolonged battle of wits may occur before a really big lobster is overpowered.

An octopus is always a great attraction in an aquarium, but it can also be a headache. During the night it often has an urge to visit other tanks to see what it can find, and has an amazing ability to squeeze through narrow openings. Unless a really octopus-proof cover can be devised for its tank, the aquarium's lobsters and crabs are likely to be converted into heaps of broken shells.

When it leaves its lair at night the octopus has three methods of moving about in the water. If it wants to go really fast it does so by jet-propulsion — achieved by breathing fast. Streams of water are always being drawn into the gill cavity and, after passing over the gills, expelled through a tube called the siphon. When an octopus is at rest these gentle breathing movements are easily seen.

By breathing much faster the water is forced out of the siphon in powerful jets, each capable of shooting the animal backwards for two or three yards. At other times it waves its arms gently in the water to move itself slowly forward, or walks along the sea bed on the tips of its arms.

Mr. Sinclair, of Torquay Aquarium, has been particularly successful during the past few years at keeping octopuses alive in tanks for considerable periods. He believes that a captive octopus needs some kind of occupation, and always provides his specimens with heaps of stones and small pieces of rock. With these they will sometimes play for hours, rolling the rocks about and piling them up in various parts of their tanks.

On one occasion a companion was introduced into a tank in which a solitary octopus had lived for some time with its pile of stones. The new arrival soon became interested in these, and started to raid the pile in order to build a heap of its own.

The owner, however, had no intention of sharing its goods with the newcomer, and almost as fast as one removed them the other moved away to bring them back. The difficulty was finally solved, and any possibility of war between the two averted, by providing the newcomer with a second heap all to itself.

After this both seemed contented, and very little "borrowing" ever occurred.

YES, WE GOT NO BONURA

Baseball fans remember Zeke Bonura as a first baseman who could hit a ball a mile, but couldn't cover much more than the ground he stood on. One day Zeke waved at a ball about two feet away and it went for a hit. As the runner took a wide turn toward second, the outfielder fired to first where Zeke grabbed it and almost nipped the runner.

In his box behind first, Clark Griffith, the Washington owner, was surprised to hear Mrs. Griffith applauding vigorously.

"What's the idea?" he sourly asked. "Didn't you see him let the ball go through?"

To which the missus replied, "Yes, but he got it on the way back."

Rock 'n' Riot

Wrapped in a package called "The Big Beat," Dick Jockey Alan Freed has long rolled across the land, introducing rock 'n' roll stars and keynoting gone music with the express intention of inciting his teen-age followers to happy frenzy. Last month, the acknowledged "King of Rock 'n' Roll" rolled into Boston and set up shop in his 7,200-seat Arena. Almost 5,000 hip kids poured in the Arena to catch his 17 acts, including four bands, and starring Dreamboat Crooner Jerry Lee Lewis.

Frenzy soon set in. The aisles filled with dancers, and others got into the groove by jumping on their seats. The head of the 20 cops on hand decided that more light on the subject would help curb the crowd's antics. The house lights were turned up. Then, according to Arena Manager Paul Brown, sincere-faced "Deejay" Freed huffed "I guess the police here in Boston don't want you kids to have a good time." Whatever Freed said, the effect was magical. The Arena really began jumping — while Brown paced his office, "praying it would end."

A while before midnight the wound-up kids spilled into the streets. Just who was responsible for what happened next is a matter of dispute. All around the Arena common citizens were set upon, robbed and sometimes beaten. A young sailor caught a knife in the belly, and two girls with him were thrashed. In all, nine men and six women were roughed up enough to require hospital treatment. Boston police blamed Freed and his frenetic fans, but could not prove it, since they nabbed nobody. Freed's defenders pointed out that the Arena area has been the site of frequent muggings in the past; the toughs might simply have used the crowds pouring out of the Arena as a cover.

But Boston's Mayor John Hynes did not want to hear arguments or evidence. He ordered that no licenses be issued for any more rock 'n' roll shows, and a Boston grand jury returned an indictment against Freed — under an old "anti-anarchy" law — for inciting "the unlawful destruction of property." Professing alarm, and perhaps jump over growing criticism of juvenile delinquency, officials in New Haven and Newark seized on the Boston incident as an excuse to ban scheduled Freed appearances.

Freed promptly quit his $25,000-a-year job with Manhattan's radio station WINS because it "failed to stand behind my policies and principles," and returned to his Stamford, Conn. home to contemplate his grievances. Snapped Freed: "Those kids in Boston were the greatest — swell, wonderful kids. But the police were terrible."

Deadly Pattern

They call it Olaotia, and pray to the goddess Ma Olaihandi to keep it away. But each year the people of Calcutta know that before the reviving monsoon rains arrive some time in June, the infection will sweep through their steaming and fetid streets, sometimes killing as many as half of those it touches. Even for a city stamped by the World Health Organization as the "worst cholera epidemic area in the world," this year's outbreak has been especially bad. At one point the Nirlatan Sarkar hospital, which specializes in treating the disease, was admitting a new patient every four minutes, the highest admission rate the hospital has known in 20 years.

All day, vans equipped with loudspeakers drive through the city begging people to get inoculated. In narrow alleys drummers parade like town criers, carrying the same message. But as in every year, all these efforts have come too late. Though 400 inoculators have been at work since November, they reached only 300,000 out of 4,000,000 people in five months. One reason: the money for the necessary hypodermic syringes just never showed up. When the epidemic struck in earnest, five of the city's 22 ambulances had been condemned as useless, and ten more were under repair. Only one driver was on duty at a time to answer calls for help.

Everyone knows that Calcutta's water system is precariously close to collapse, but it has not been overhauled since 1926. Sewage invariably seeps into the drinking water, carrying possible death to every tap. In spite of a belated garbage-collecting campaign, piles of refuse still lie festering along Calcutta's winding "gullies," and on street after street, vendors

Why should you face that haylopper or handle bales again this year, when you can take the back-break out of the job with a McKee One-Man Shredder Harvester?

Remember a McKee Shredder Harvester is not a "one-job" machine, aside making a better hay than with any other equipment, they are widely used for harvesting grass silage, corn stange, swathed grain and combined straw.

of rotting food still hawk their fly-infested wares. In the teaming bustles (slums), where people drink out of the same slimy ponds they wash in, the disease spreads relentlessly from hut to hut, bringing with it its agonizing retching and diarrhea. In one week alone nearly 1,000 people died — yet India's government continues to be too little and too late with help. Said one bitter physician after ten hours with his vomiting patients: "We don't mind hard work if it is worthwhile. But after a time the epidemic will subside only to recur the same time next year, and the pattern it will follow will be identical and without any improvement."

Old Boys' Reunion

Madoc is ready to welcome home a large number of its Old Boys and Girls. During the past few weeks homes and places of business have been redecorated and lately dressed up with decorations for Madoc's Third Old Boys' Reunion. Already a few of the former residents have arrived in town and hundreds more are expected before the end of the week. The committee in charge of the Reunion has worked hard and offers a program that allows plenty of time for visiting and renewing acquaintances as well as a variety of entertainment for both young and old.

Saturday, June 28th, the first day of the Reunion, guests are asked to register at Nickle's Jewellery & Gifts, where they will receive a Reunion Souvenir and program of events. During the afternoon and evening, Murray Bros. Circus will present performances in the Arena featuring Jugglers, Acrobats, Cowboys, Dogs, Clowns, performing Ponies, Aerialists, etc.

Sunday morning, Madoc Lodge No 48, A.F. & A.M. will attend Divine Service in Trinity United Church where Mr. Lane will preach his farewell sermon.

At the same time members and visitors of Madoc L.O.L., No. 160, will attend Divine Service in St. Peter's Presbyterian Church. Following the service the members will parade to the park where a wreath will be placed on the cenotaph.

Sunday afternoon Madoc Canadian Legion 363, will play hosts to a Zone Drum Head Service. Veterans and personnel of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment along with three military bands will fall in at the ball park and parade to the Thompson Memorial Park where the service will be conducted by Rev. T. H. Good, of Kingston. Addresses of welcome will be given by Com. John Howard, Hon. Sidney Smith and Mr. C. I. Ross. There will be a massed choir under the leadership of Mr. Ivor Hughes and Mrs. Taylor Redden will be the soloist. Organist will be Mr. Stanley Hawthorne. The service includes the Consecration of colours of the Madoc Branch of the Ladies' Auxiliary. Following the service the parade will proceed west on St. Lawrence Street where the Salute will be taken by Group Captain R. M. Cox, Commanding Officer, RCAF Station, Trenton. Bands in attendance will be the RCAF Band, Trenton, Hastings & P. E. Reg't. Band, Belleville, and Bowmanville Legion Pipe Band.

Sunday evening, there will be a special Old Boys' Reunion Church Service in St. John's Anglican Church, where the sermon will be preached by Rev. Wm. Robinson, a former Rector. Other former ministers taking part in the service will be Rev. A. Pepper, Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne, and Rev. T. H. Good.

Monday morning, ex-Students will gather at the Madoc Public School where several former teachers will be on hand to greet their pupils of years ago.

At 1 o'clock a motor cavalcade will leave Madoc for Eldorado for the unveiling service of the historical plaque to commemorate the first gold discovery in Ontario. The plaque is being erected by Department of Historical Sites, Department of Travel and Publicity and highway markers pointing to the plaque will also be erected. The plaque and park will later be taken over and looked after by Eldorado and Bannockburn Womens' Institute. The unveiling will be done by H. L. Richaby, Deputy Minister of Mines. Speakers will be Mrs. Chas. Pigden, Earl Sager, Lloyd Price, Roscoe Robson, M.P.P., Honourable Geo. S. White, and Mr. Cranston, M.P.P., of Midland. Following the unveiling ceremony the cavalcade will visit O'Hara's Mill Conservation Area, Deloro and Bethlehem Steel.

One of the highlights of the Reunion may prove to be an afternoon tea sponsored jointly by Ladies' Clubs of the various churches. This tea will be held on the Presbyterian Church lawn and for the men as well as the ladies. It is expected those going on the motor cavalcade as well as others will attend.

Monday evening a Community Sing Song will be held at the Park, where Jack Kincaid will be master of ceremonies and Stanley Hawthorne will be featured on the Lowrey Electric Organ. There will also be games, refreshment booths, etc. Following the sing song, a dance will be held in the Armouries. Music will be furnished by Ernie Victor's Orchestra.

Tuesday morning a huge Calithumpian Parade will pass through the main streets of the village, starting at Pigden's and Derry's Garages on Russell Street. In the parade there will be three bands, floats, clowns, drum majorettes, etc. For the past several days work has been going on secretly in garages, barns, etc., building floats of various kinds. Don't be surprised this parade proves to be the best ever held in Madoc. Out-of-town floats will include one from Stirling advertising their Centennial to be held this year and one from Belleville showing the Allan Cup won by the Belleville Maces this year.

Tuesday afternoon, a full afternoon's program of sports will be held at the ball park. In attendance will be the Havelock Pipe Band, who will put on a program. Two ball games, the first one starting at 1 o'clock between the all stars of Tannery, Cooper and Eldorado and the all stars of Millbridge, Gilmour and Coe Hill. The second game scheduled to get underway at 3 p.m. is between the Madoc Juvenile 1957 Ontario Champions and the Belleville Bobcats. The Bobcats have on their line-up many of the Allan Cup Hockey players and will feature such players as Wayne Brown, Bob Green, Bob Hull and several former National Hockey League Players. Time nor money has been spared to make Tuesday-afternoon's program an outstanding one.

Tuesday evening will see the Reunion come to a close with a huge Street Carnival. The program includes professional artists in a variety show, round and square dancing, games, bingo and refreshment booths.

During the Reunion prizes will be given to the person coming the farthest distance and to the oldest person present, etc.

INSTITUTES CELEBRATE 50th ANNIVERSARY

North Hastings District and Eldorado and Bannockburn Branch of the Women's Institute celebrated their 50th Anniversary at Eldorado, on Tuesday, June 10th, 1958.

The District President, Mrs. Ernest Irwin, presided. The morning session opened with the singing of the Institute Ode and repeating in unison the Mary Stewart Collect and the Lord's Prayer. Mrs. Russell Empey welcomed the guests in a few well-chosen words, the response being given by a member of Paudash Branch. The minutes of the last District meeting were read and the Financial and Auditors reports were given, showing a balance on hand of $483.52. Miss Jayne Gay moved the acceptance of these reports, seconded by Mrs. Tinsdell. Mrs. Irwin gave a brief resume of her work during the year. She visited 12 of the 14 Branches where she found satisfactory progress. She then introduced the President of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario, Mrs. James Haggerty. Other guests who were introduced were Miss Sandra Thibadeau, Home Economist; Mrs. Clifford Gillespie, Provincial Representative of Belleville Area; Mrs. J. Deveney, Pres. of West Northumberland; Mrs. Nelson Usher, Pres. of North Northumberland; Miss G. Mowers, Pres. and Mrs. R. Robson, Past President of East Hastings District.

Mrs. Gillespie reported from the Federation Board, telling of some changes made and stressing the importance of Officers and Convenors being familiar with the duties of their respective offices and of carrying out these duties fully and promptly.

The District Convenors read the reports they had summarized from those received from Branch Convenors and all were concise and most interesting. The only criticism was that in no case had all 14 Branches reported and again it was explained how important it is for officers and convenors to be prompt in fulfilling their duties.

Miss Jayne Gay, of Ivanhoe, conducted a beautiful service in loving memory of the 8 members who have passed away during the year. Flowers were placed on the altar and soft music was played by Mrs. Reg Haggerty.

Miss Thibadeau explained the Extension services available to the Branch and asked that these be carefully considered.

Dinner was served in the church.

Parlours by the Eldorado ladies.

The afternoon session opened with a sing-song led by Mrs. Fred Bailey and the roll call of Branches was responded to by each President, telling when her branch was organized. Mrs. Ken Bateman read a History of Eldorado and Bannockburn Branch and then Mrs. Hugh Empey, a charter member, cut the Branch Birthday cake. Two District Charter members were present, Miss Raney and Mrs. Hugh Empey. Each was presented with a corsage in recognition of their years of service.

A quartette from Wellman's Branch, dressed in old fashioned clothes, sang several old time favorites. Letters of greeting were read from Miss McKercher and Hon. Sidney Smith. A fashion parade proved to be most interesting and amusing when some 25 ladies modelled gowns that their grandparents had worn. The prize went to Miss Jean Loney who was dressed in her grandmother's wedding gown and had with pink ruffled parasol. A history of the district was read by Mrs. E. Moore who had compiled it from past Secretaries' books. It was interesting and challenging to those women who are now carrying on the work, so well and nobly begun 50 years ago.

Mrs. J. Haggerty, Prov. President, brought greetings to the District and spoke briefly on the topic "For Home and Country." Mrs. E. Irwin thanked Mrs. Haggerty and Mrs. C. Blackburn presented her with a gift from the District.

Hart's and Riggs' Branch afforded a bit of fun and nonsense with their Kitchen Band and then the District Birthday Cake was cut. Miss Thibadeau reported on Girls' work during the year and told of those who received County and Provincial Honours.

Branch attendance prize was won by Wellman's Branch. It was a brief case.

The new slate of Officers, presented by Mrs. Arthur Holmes, is as follows:

President, Mrs. E. Irwin, Campbellford; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. C. Blackburn, Eldorado; 2nd Vice-President, Miss Jayne Gay, Ivanhoe; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. C. Linn.

Bonarlaw, R.R. 1; Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. A. Chambers, Eldorado; Federation Representative, Mrs. C. Stewart, Campbellford; Alternate, Mrs. Frank Crosby.

Bonarlaw, R.R. 1; Auditors, Miss Grace Warren, Marmora, Mrs. W. J. Barlow, Bonarlaw; Press Reporter, Mrs. Newell Broad, Madoc; District Delegate, Mrs. Ken Nicol, Madoc; Alternate, Mrs. E. Moore, Madoc; Standing Committees — Agriculture and Canadian Industries, Mrs. Russell Empey, Eldorado; Citizenship and Education, Mrs. Leonard Trotter, Madoc; Public Relations Representative, Mrs. Frank Slater, McArthur's Mills; Historical Research and Current Events, Mrs. Florence McKeown, Springbrook; Home Economics and Health, Mrs. K. Tompkins, Harold; Resolutions, Mrs. Arthur Holmes, Queensboro; Jr. Institute, Miss

Nancy Reynolds, Madoc, R.R. 3.

The Courtesy report was given by Mrs. F. Crosby and the meeting closed with the National Anthem. Tea and birthday cake was served.

MADOC W. I.

The June meeting of the Madoc Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. A. Herrington, with the president, Mrs. E. T. Naylor, opening the meeting with a poem entitled "A Healthy Prayer." There were seventeen members and two visitors present.

The Ode and Mary Stewart Collect were given. It was decided to have "Hospitality Foods" for the extension course. Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. E. T. Naylor and Mrs. Nicol were named as a committee to look after the course. It is being planned to have a float for the W.I. in the parade for the Old Boys' Reunion. Mrs. Moon presented Mrs. Aylesworth with a diary. She is leaving soon on a trip, spending some time in the British Isles and on the continent. Mrs. A. Bailey and Mrs. McCrimmon gave a full and interesting report of the District Annual held at Eldorado United Church, on June 10th. Eldorado and Bannockburn Women's Institute branches also celebrated their 50th anniversary.

Mrs. S. R. Beatty and Mrs. George White prepared the programme on Home Economics and Health. A paper entitled "Ten Years on Health Progress" was given by Mrs. Beatty. Man now has the knowledge and will to eliminate infectious diseases from the world. Tuberculosis is gradually disappearing and very recently there have been major advances against poliomyelitis. The common cold, influenza and pneumonia are still widely prevalent. But there is growing evidence that these and other similar infections will eventually be brought under control. With all the wonder drugs and advances in research, babies are now born to live, not to die. Increasingly, they can expect long life to the full span of three score years and ten. The past ten years of health progress have clearly demonstrated that man has in his hands, tools that can change the world, bringing to all men, new vigor, health and hope.

Mrs. E. T. Naylor gave the paper prepared by Mrs. White and it gave a full explanation of "Contract Farming." Mrs. Beatty had a contest on "Parts of the Body," with Mrs. Moon winning the prize. Mrs. A. Empey moved a vote of thanks to the hostess and the convenors of the programme.

COOPER AND REMINGTON W. I.

The Cooper and Remington W.I. held its June meeting at the home of Mrs. Fred Holmes on June 18th, with an attendance of twenty-four women and five children. The President, Mrs. Rex Rollins, opened the meeting with all singing "The More We Get Together", the Ode and repeating the Mary Stewart Collect.

Business was dealt with and thank you letters read.

The delegates to the Institute Convention, Mrs. George Harris and Mrs. Arthur Parks each gave a splendid report.

The Convenor of Historical Research, Mrs. Albert Bird, opened her part with a reading. It being Grandmothers' day, several were present.

The roll call was answered by "What I admire in elderly women."

The motto, "Do not resent growing old. Many are denied the privilege", was well given by Mrs. Lynn McCoy. Mrs. Will Rollins, a grandmother, gave a splendid paper on "Life in Grandmother's day." Music was given by Lea Int'Veld. A humorous reading was given by Mrs. Gordon Chapman. Current events was given by Mrs. Fred Rollins. Numerous old-fashioned photos were passed around.

The meeting closed by singing the Queen. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

ANNE HIRST

Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: I am married to a man I never loved; and I still long for my old sweetheart. When I was 15 I was engaged to him. He went into service, and on one leave we had a silly quarrel (as kids do) and broke off. About that time I met my present husband, who fell in love with me. I liked him, that was all, but my mother thought I should accept him. Well, the old folks think they know everything, so I did. Almost at once, we knew it was a mistake.

"For seven years I have tried to keep my husband happy, and he is. But lately I saw my boy friend accidentally, and I knew he was still the only man for me. Soon we are going home for a visit, and I want to see him and settle things between us. My husband is very devoted and gives me everything I want, but I am floundering now in my own confusion.

"Shall I tell my husband? Or must I reconcile myself to spending all my life with a man I cannot love? There are no children to be considered, and I am only 22.

UNHAPPY"

ALL WRONG
As soon as you married, you say "we" knew it was all wrong. Your husband does not share that opinion; he is happily married to you and has no idea that you are not as satisfied. Yet you would end your marriage on the slim hope that you could become the wife of a boy you have seen once in seven years. Aren't you taking a great deal for granted? How do you know he still cares for you? He may even be married by this time. If you barge in on him declaring your love, you might find yourself in a highly embarrassing situation.

Is your own happiness the only thing that matters? You promised to cling to your husband for the rest of your life. What excuse can you give for leaving him now — if you could? I am afraid you are seeing yourself as a martyr, married to a man whose only fault is that he has thoroughly spoiled you. (It is not his fault he could not win your love.) You have done a fine job in keeping him contented, though your heart was not in it, and you deserve credit for your efforts. But you are still an unhappy woman.

What you need is an outlet for all this affection that lies unspent within you. How could you expect to find it with this childhood sweetheart? He would be a stranger to you now.

It is unfortunate that you do not have a child. It would give you something real to live for, and sharing the responsibility would draw you and your husband closer, give you a mutual aim in life. If you cannot bear children, have you thought of adopting one?

Give up this foolish notion. Accept your husband as he is and be grateful for him. Round out your life through new responsibilities. Your church, and a number of other local groups, are waiting to guide you toward a richer life through services that you have not explored.

Your life can be beautiful, and you can make it so.

MOTHER KNOWS BEST

"Dear Anne Hirst: I am 15½ and I'm in love with a boy whom I've been going with for seven months. We have just found out he has a bad reputation, and comes from a family that isn't thought much of, so Mom wants me to stop seeing him.

"She wants me to welcome another boy, a nice one whose people are respected; he's in the Navy and returns in January. Then Mom wants me to date him, and drop the one I care for! What can I do to make her see that is impossible?

UNHAPPY"

I not only agree with your mother. I go further. Break up with this boy you like at once, making any excuse you please. You are too young to realize how vital to your social life is your reputation; if you keep on dating him you cannot but share his bad name, and that might take a long, long time to live down.

If you let your feeling overcome your judgment, how do you know the Navy lad will want to date you when he comes home next month? A well-bred young man with the right instincts chooses nice girls to take out, and if this one hears of your association with your present friend he and his people might pass you up entirely.

Be smart!

Many a wife finds her marriage unsatisfactory for a number of reasons, but she remembers the vows she made and goes on as best she can. There is a spiritual solace in doing the right thing, and it often brings surprising rewards. Anne Hirst can help you find them. If you write her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ont.

SEW WHAT'S NEW?—Shades of the old 10-20-30 melodrama, Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl! It's not Bertha—it's screen star Joanne Woodward. You've heard about the dress she ran up for her big night—the one when she won an Oscar. Well, an Atlanta, Ga., museum wanted it for their wardrobe collection. Joanne gave them a lady-like "Nix!" saying "I spent nearly $100 for the material, designed the dress and worked on it for three weeks. Why, I'm almost as proud of the dress as I am of the Oscar!"

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

by Gwendoline P. Clarke

One thing visitors like about our house is that we have a different view from each window. That is because the house is situated right in the curve of a crescent. It does make it more attractive. Just by walking from one room to another we have a change of scenery. From my workroom window this is what I see: A group of small trees—ash—nothing very special as trees go but too nice to cut down. Beyond the trees, lawn, and then the vegetable garden with a few rows of bulbs and perennials heeled in waiting for Joy to remove them. Back of the garden small shrubs of lilac in between more ash trees and a few poplars. And hopping around over everything are the birds—robins, kill-deer, warblers and the inevitable starlings and sparrows.

Beyond our property the view is not so pleasing. A large lot, that was once a lovely garden, in the middle of which there used to be a very attractive home. A few weeks ago a wrecking crew moved in and reduced the nine-year-old house to rubble. The site is reserved for a gas station. Beyond the vacant lot runs the Dundas Highway—close enough to be convenient; far enough away that the traffic does not bother us. At the far side of the highway an apple orchard. But at the moment what interests me most is our own garden—peas, beans, carrots, beets — coming along in great form. Also sunflowers. By the time the sunflowers are in bloom we won't see much of the vacant lot—but we hope to see a lot more birds.

So that is the outlook from one window — trees, plant and bird life with fast moving traffic in the distance. An intermingling of the old and the new — nature at its best and yet close to one of the main arteries of Ontario, accommodating motorists, buses, and trucks of all kinds. Milk tanks trucking milk from the farms to the city; cattle trucks transporting livestock — for which the farmer hopes he will get enough returns to pay for the cost of raising and feeding the animals; cement mixing tanks going—who knows where — to pour cement for the basements of more new homes or maybe the abutments of a bridge? So much to see — so many people coming and going, none knowing the business of the other. Even more remote in contact than "ships that pass in the night and greet each other in passing." So many types of living involved in all that I see from my workroom window. Almost staggering when you think of it, isn't it?

We, too, have our busy days. Last Wednesday we went to a farm at Horning's Mills, just for the day. It was wonderfully clear weather and the view from the Caledon Hills was grand. But oh dear, just one more road where trees are being slaughtered. Maybe it is necessary — I don't know. Road work was in progress—curves being straightened, hills reduced. I suppose if we didn't see the stumps we wouldn't miss the trees. It's knowing that hurts.

We were somewhat disappointed with our trip—wind so strong there was no pleasure in being out. Partner was away with our farmer-friend to the back of the farm digging post-holes but we women-folk stayed pretty close to the warmth and comfort of the old kitchen stove.

Later in the week I looked in at two separate rummage sales. I love a rummage sale—it is just like a surprise packet—you never know what you'll find. I always head straight for the odds-and-ends table. And what did I get? I'll tell you. A small Wedgewood jug, a little handpainted fancy dish, a Spode vase and an out-of-print book of prose. Fifty cents was the total cost! The Wedgewood piece has a slight chip which can be patched if I ever get around to it. The Spode vase is pure white and looks grand with a huge bouquet of purple lilac. Now I ask you what more could one get for such a small outlay.

However, I have been discarding as well as collecting. The parents of the young couple I told you about last week who were burnt out came along one day with a pick-up truck idled filled to capacity with odds and ends from our basement. Beds, two good, spring-filled mattresses that we had brought along with us from the farm hoping that someone, sometime, would be glad to have them. So we are happy that they will be put to good use as the young people are rebuilding their house and were short of beds. Friends had certainly been good to them—a dining-room suite, complete set of dishes, clothing for the family—all were donated plus a collection of about five hundred dollars in cash. In time of need it is quite evident there is still plenty of kindness left in our poor old mixed-up world.

Well, I guess it is time to hunt something for our mid-day meal. And I do mean hunt! Ten for dinner last night has left the frig looking a little sad. Me too —like the morning after. Our grandsons are quite a going concern when they all get together —bless their wee souls.

"Make it Thursday, Abdul—I'm getting married on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday!"

King-Size Build-Up Good For Music?

One afternoon recently, a tall, obviously tired-but-happy young man arrived at the RCA Victor studios on East 24th Street in New York to hear the tapes of a piano concert he had played at Carnegie Hall the night before. As the majestically crashing chords of the Tchaikovsky Piano Concerto in B-flat minor beat upon his ears, he tensed and grimaced. "Listen here — now," he said earnestly. "I made such a mistake here." Clutching his bushy, blond head, he rocked back and forth in anguish.

The miracle was that Van Cliburn was able to think at all, let alone accurately recall bloopers he made the night before. He had come to the studios straight from the Waldorf-Astoria, where Mayor Robert F. Wagner had given him a luncheon, and before that he had ridden up Lower Broadway in the first ticker-tape parade ever accorded a musician. The next night he would play in Philadelphia, and later in the week he would meet the President at the White House, play before diplomats and government officials in Washington, and dine at the Russian Embassy. On Sunday, by making his first post-Moscow television appearance on Steve Allen's program, he would repay an old debt, for Allen's music director, Skitch Henderson, had spotted Cliburn's talent back in 1955 and twice put him on Steve's "Tonight" show. During the week to come, he would play again in New York to another sold-out house at Carnegie Hall, and he would make his first phonograph records, for RCA Victor. Faced with both the recession and the usual seasonal classical slump, dealers pinned high hopes on the first release, the Tchaikovsky concerto.

For Cliburn, the summer promised little letup. He will perform in the U.S. and abroad, and everywhere he goes the pattern will be the same. As a symbol of U.S. culture and good will, he will have to keep the charm turned on. Fortunately for him, this is only doing what comes naturally. As a pianist, he will be expected to play like a Rachmaninoff and Horowitz rolled into one. This will be tougher, for he is, after all, only 23 years old.

Seldom again, however, will Cliburn have to endure a strain quite like the one he went through at his Carnegie Hall appearance, when he undertook to re-create the performance which had won him the prize in Moscow and made him the talk of the Russian people. In place of the Moscow Philharmonic, he had behind him the Symphony of the Air, but the man who conducted was the same — Kiril P. Kondrashin, the colorful Soviet maestro whom Van had said repeatedly had been "like a daddy to me." Although Kondrashin, a youthful looking 44, seemed more like an elder brother, there was no denying his devoted and sensitive accompaniment.

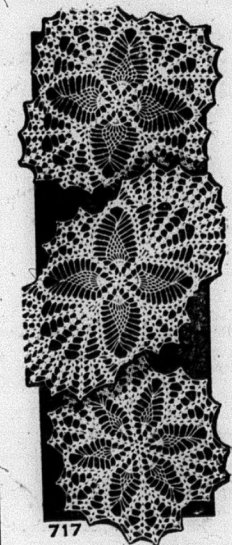

Cliburn was nervous throughout the Tchaikovsky concerto which opened the program — more so, Kondrashin said later, than he had seemed in Moscow. But in the Rachmaninoff Concerto No. 3 which followed, the maestro noted, "he was inspired as before." The audience, preponderantly non-musical, must have agreed, for at the end it gave Cliburn a cheering and ovation.

Van Cliburn is a remarkable, even extraordinary young pianist. His manner is assured, and he possesses a brilliant technique in the old-fashioned romantic style. He still needs, however, to look more deeply into the heart and soul of the music he plays, and to learn that a "big tone" is not produced by pounding the keys.

Despite the obvious dangers of over-exposure to Cliburn himself, most musicians are convinced that the Cliburn case, king-size build-up and all, will be good for music if other outstanding young talents get a better break — from the press, the public, and the managers who book them. Certainly Kondrashin was impressed at Cliburn's reception. "When I go home," he said, "I'll tell them all about it — how you love music and how you love Van, not only because he is a very good musician but because he is a very good and warm young man." — From NEWSWEEK.

BEST FEET FORWARD—The judges had a picnic choosing "Miss Aquaducus" in a contest to select a tiptoe beauty representing a water show. She's Barbara Rilling, 18, center. Runners-up are Ellen Kampman, left, and Barbara Serival.

UNPOPULAR MOTHER—Residents of Jalapa, Mexico, raised a storm of angry protest when this statue was erected in the village's square as a tribute to mothers. It has been branded "indecent" and "an insult to Mexican motherhood." Architect Sergio Besnier, from whose drawings the statue was made by sculptor Jora L. Ruiz, says the figure represents "the happiness a mother feels in playing with her child." The statue may be happy, but the people who see it aren't.

Safe Passage Through The Skies

Safety in the air has become an accepted thing. Passengers fasten seat belts as casually and automatically as they button their coats. On overseas flights, there is additionally a brief demonstration of how to don a Mae West jacket. It is done quietly, almost inconspicuously.

But not so with the military. At least, I can recall a "ditching" briefing at a Florida airbase some years ago that was both explicit and graphic. We — a group of newspaper correspondents — were about to take off over the blue Caribbean for Puerto Rico to cover the war maneuvers off Vieques Island.

Coming down for refueling before the long over-water hop, we were conducted into a sort of classroom, equipped with rows of chair, a blackboard, chalk, and on prominent display for demonstration purposes—a Mae West life jacket.

It was a violent, unbecoming shade of yellow, and was adorned with more gadgets and implements than a carpenter's overalls — including a clearly marked supply of "shark repellent." A rather meager one, it seemed to us.

"When that is gone and the sharks aren't — what then?" Someone put the question in all our minds. The briefing officer brightened, as if to say, "I'm glad you asked that," and whipped a savage-looking dagger out of its sheath at the waistline of the vest. We all lapsed into sudden silence.

First of all, we were told, the jacket must be inflated. One gadget does this automatically — but just "in case" there is another tube. "Just blow," beamed our instructor. Then he held up a small container of bright yellow liquid to be squirted over the water. Even a ship looks small from the air, and a bobbing life raft is a mere pinpoint without something to mark the spot.

As for the life raft, the thing to remember is not to lose your head and inflate it before you leave the plane, or you'll never get it out of the door. Above all, don't enter a life raft with your shoes on — if you have spike heels, that is.

At this point, most of us were contemplating a little war maneuver of our own, known as retreating. Once airborne again, we forgot the whole thing. Or did we? The fact that I can recall it so clearly today indicates it must have been a pretty good safety drill at that.

After all, these wise precautions are not unrelated to the boat drill on shipboard. No good skipper omits this little exercise. Passengers obediently don baggy life jackets and report to their allotted lifeboat stations.

The only time I ever experienced a serious alarm, when our ship came within a few feet of crashing into another in the fog, I stood rooted to the spot. My life jacket was under my berth several decks below. The ship could have gone down before I could have found it and got topside again.

Crew members whipped past me on the dead run, shrugging on their life jackets as they sped to their stations. I recall the captain of the ship bragging later on of the calm, obedient way in which every passenger reacted to the signal, reporting to his lifeboat station fully jacketed and without panic, writes Josephine Ripley in The Christian Science Monitor.

I remember saying I thought it was fine and that I was certainly grateful we had a captain skillful enough to avoid an almost certain collision. In his flush of pleasure and relief, I hoped he would fail to notice that my face was considerably redder than his.

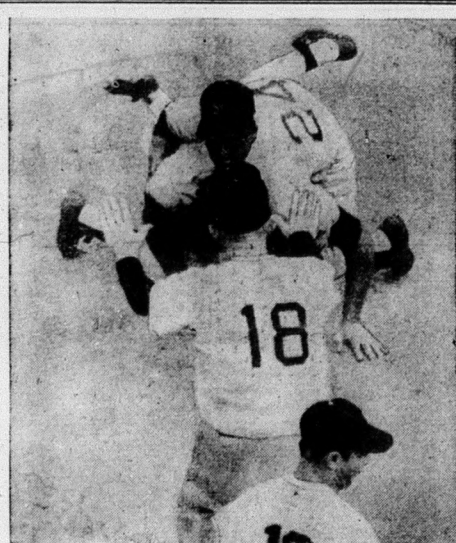

Boat drills, ditching briefings, air raid drills, fire drills in schools — all constitute an expression of wise preparation, not for disaster but for safety. The tremendous increase in air traffic and air speeds is even now bringing about new air traffic regulations to meet the new conditions.

Military transport planes have adopted as a safety measure the installation of seats which face the rear of the plane. The theory is that the back of the seat acts as a shock absorber in the event of a crash landing.

Commercial planes so far have refrained from adopting this unusual arrangement fearing an unfavorable passenger reaction. It does seem odd to take off and land backwards, although once in the air it is hard to tell whether you're coming or going anyway.

TURNABOUT

In Birmingham, England, Nick Brookes, manager of a Royal S.P.C.A. home for the protection and care of animals, resigned to become handler of fox-hounds for the West Warwickshire Hunt.

THIS IS BASEBALL!—Giants' star Willie Mays tackles teammate Orlando Cepeda at Pittsburgh's Forbes Field during a game with the Pirates. Willie tackled Cepeda when the latter attempted to come to the aid of pitcher Ruben Gomez with a bat. Gomez and Pirate Manager Danny Murtaugh were squared off in a battle over a "duster" pitch. Giant Manager Bill Rigney (No. 18) rushes to the struggling pair.

Why The Giants Are Going Good

Willie Mays took time out to think. To the Milwaukee crowd, he seemed simply to be rubbing dirt onto his palms. But, bent over just outside the batters' box at County Stadium, Willie was contemplating his next swing.

The score was tied, and Milwaukee's unbeaten Warren Spahn had pitched effectively against the San Francisco Giants. Now, in the ninth inning, Willie was up with a runner on first base. "I oughta go for it," Mays thought. "I ain't swung for a homer all year, but this time I got to." He stepped back into the box and, swinging from the heels, slammed one of Spahn's sliders deep into the left-field bleachers for two runs and the ball game.

"Every year," Willie explained later, "there's maybe ten or twenty times when I go for a homer. The other times they just come natural."

Even New York baseball writers are conceding that Willie, the natural, and a prize batch of San Francisco rookies made the 1958 Giants a racy-looking improvement over the club that pulled out of New York last year. "A cable car named desire," cracked Dick Young in The New York Daily News. For their new home city, the Giants had pulled out half-a-dozen victories in the ninth, were running bases with great daring, and were slugging their homers (team total: 64) with dramatic timeliness. Sixth last year, the Giants were leading the National League pennant race by one game late last week.

The difference was easily spotted: A rookie first baseman named Orlando Cepeda (thirteen homers), a rookie rightfielder named Willie Kirkland (four homers), a fine rookie catcher named Bob Schmidt, a slick rookie third baseman named Jim Davenport, strong relief pitching from veteran Marv Grissom, plus tremendously improved play by storpest Daryl Spencer and a suddenly matured center fielder named Mays.

"Did you notice," asked manager Bill Rigney, his eyes sparkling behind steel-rimmed glasses, "how Willie has grown up? Whenever he plays between two kids (Kirkland and Don Taussig), he's like a coach, the way he moves them with the hitters. Then, when the kids come up against a new pitcher, there's Willie off talking to them. 'Watch this guy's screwball,' he says. He's even dressing better. Things like that. I mean, Willie isn't a kid any more."

At 27, Willie Howard Mays Jr. might well be the finest all-around player in baseball—better than Mickey Mantle defensively, comparable to Stan Musial at bat, and more dangerous than either on the bases. When he came up seven years ago, a bubbling, implausible rookie, he possessed immense raw talent and immense naiveté. "I like to sign papers," he once told a friend, "because whenever I sign, somebody sends me money." After day games at the Polo Grounds he played stickball with school children in the streets of Harlem. Willie knows more about papers now, and he has given up stickball. But he still plays implausibly — thirteen homers, 36 runs batted in, seven stolen bases, eleven amazing catches, and a .402 batting average after 44 games — and he still bubbles just as he always has done when he talks about his game.

Recently, before the Giants defeated the Phils, 7-6 on a ninth-inning homer by Willie Kirkland, Mays lounged on a bed in his hotel room and discussed San Francisco, the rookies, and himself.

"It's a nice town," Willie began, but "you can't tell how much the town's helped us, 'cause you don't know what the rookies woulda done in New York. Up in Harlem I knew everybody. In San Francisco, I don't know the place yet. I'm a little afraid."

"Scared and hitting .400?" a reporter asked Willie.

"I ain't afraid on the ball field," Mays said. "I know what to do there. We got these kids, I got to help them, like Leo (Durocher) and (Ed) Stanky and (Alvin) Dark tried to help me. Or (Ted) Williams. Last year I was going bad around the time of the All-Star game and Williams saw me at the station. 'Hey, Willie?' he says, 'you ain't hitting like Willie should. What you doing with your front foot?'"

Mays sprang up and demonstrated a foot-in-the-bucket stride. "Great hitter like Williams helps me," he said, "I got to help the kids. I only wish Williams was on this club so he could help me all the time."

Willie began pacing back and forth. "I don't like to watch games," he said. "I see a guy do something wrong, it hurts me. I don't even know how much I like to play."

"You're beginning to sound like a veteran," the reporter said.

"I love to catch fly balls and I love to steal bases, and I love to throw guys out and, man, I love to hit," Mays said. "I love it when I'm doing something. It's just when I ain't doing something, when the ball don't come to me, that I don't know how much I like it."

He paused, then: "I don't figure I'll ever be a veteran. A veteran, he's a guy like Williams. He knows it all. Me, I got to keep learning. I never had nobody could teach me the biggest things. Leo tried, but he was a 250 hitter. I learned about hitting by myself. I figure I got to keep learning for myself. Each time I make a play that I don't think I'm gonna make, I try and figure out why."

That's one big reason Willie's a better ballplayer this season and the San Francisco Giants are big men in the National League. —From NEWSWEEK.
